As Amended April 19, 1910

ARTICLE I

NAME

The name of the Society shall be THE MASSACHUSETTS SOCIETY OF THE SONS OF THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION.

ARTICLE II

OBJECTS

The objects of the Society are: to perpetuate the memory and spirit of the men who achieved American Independence, by the encouragement of historical research in relation to the Revolution and the publication of its results, the preservation of documents and relics, and of the records of the individual services of Revolutionary soldiers and patriots, and the promotion of celebrations of all patriotic anniversaries; to carry out the injunction of Washington in his Farewell Address to the American people, "to promote, as an object of primary importance, institutions for the general diffusion of knowledge," thus developing an enlightened public opinion, and affording to young and old such advantages as shall develop in them the largest capacity for performing the duties of American citizens; to cherish, maintain, and extend the institutions of American freedom; to foster true patriotism and love of country; and to aid in securing for mankind all the blessings of liberty.

ARTICLE III

MEMBERSHIP

Any man is eligible for membership who is of the age of twenty-one years, and who is descended from an ancestor who, with unfailing loyalty, rendered material aid to the cause of American Independence, as a soldier or as a seaman, or a *civil officer in one of the several Colonies or States, or of the United Colonies or States, as a recognized patriot; provided that he shall be found worthy.

Such Chapter may enact a Constitution and By-laws not inconsistent with those of the National Society, or of this Society.

* The Constitution of the National Society omits the words "civil officer" as a basis for eligibility.

No person shall be admitted to such Chapter unless he is a member in good standing of THE MASSACHUSETTS SOCIETY OF THE SONS OF THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION; and all members of this Society of the Sons of the American Revolution, resident within the territory of such Chapter, shall be eligible to membership therein. If any member of such Chapter should cease to be a member of the State Society, his membership in the Chapter shall also cease.

Membership in Chapters shall not in any way change the relations of members to the State Society, nor impair obligations of payment of dues and other requisitions of the Constitution and By-laws of said Society. Provided, however, that the Board of Managers may from time to time, by vote, authorize the return to designated Chapters, or classes of Chapters, of a portion of the annual dues paid the Society by members of said Chapters.

Every Chapter shall annually report a list of officers and members to the Secretary of the State Society on the first of April.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE SOCIETY AND BOARD OF MANAGERS

May, 1907–April 19, 1910

May 10, 1907. Board of Managers: The following standing committees were appointed:

Membership: The President, Secretary and Historian.

Finance: Alfonso S. Harris, Watson G. Cutter, and John H. Manning.

Publications and Printing: Edward C. Battis, John H. Manning and Arthur H. Wellman.

The use of the flag of the Revolution, called the "Betsy Ross," was recommended to be placed on markers on Memorial Day.

A special committee consisting of Charles F. Read, Rev. L. W. Hicks and J. M. Merriam was appointed to consider the Society's vote authorizing the erection of one of the "Bays" in the "Cloister of the Colonies," being a part of the Washington Memorial Chapel at Valley Forge. At a subsequent meeting it was voted to request Rev. William Herbert Burk of Norristown, Pa., to reserve for the Massachusetts Society the fifth, or corner, "Bay." President Charles K. Darling recommended placing a bronze tablet on the building, corner of Court street and Franklin avenue, Boston, to mark the site of a building where Benjamin Franklin served his apprenticeship as a printer, and where the "Sons of Liberty" held their meetings previous to the Revolution.

The Managers voted to place said tablet at a cost not exceeding $100 and a committee was appointed for that purpose, but the demolition of the building to make way for the Old Colony Trust Company's building prevented carrying out the project for the present.

During the summer of 1907 a circular was prepared by J. M. Merriam of the Valley Forge Committee and sent to all members of the Society asking for contributions for the purpose of building a "Bay" in the "Cloister of the Colonies" in the Washington Memorial Chapel.

"Old Home Week" in Boston July 29, 1907, was celebrated by the Boston Chapter of the Society which placed a bronze tablet on City Hall fence to commemorate the protest of the Boston Latin School Boys to General Haldiman against the destruction of their coast on School street, during the winter of 1775. General Haldiman told the story of the protest to General Gage who observed that the boys had only caught the spirit of the times, and that "what was bred in the bone would creep out in the flesh." The dedicatory exercises were admirably conducted by the President of the Chapter, the late Dr. Allen Burdick. The tablet was unveiled by Robert Treat Paine, 3d. The exercises in King's Chapel consisted of music by the Boston Festival Orchestra; invocation by Chaplain George A. Crawford; presentation of the Tablet to the City of Boston by Doctor Burdick, and its acceptance by the Hon. John F. Fitzgerald, Mayor of Boston. The address by Rev. Edward Everett Hale, D.D., President of the Boston Latin School Association, and the singing by a selected quartette combined to make this a most impressive service.

In the afternoon of the same day at a "Patriotic Mass Meeting" in Mechanic's Hall representatives from the Society took part in a reception of a flag of the Revolution, and Hon. Arthur H. Wellman, Vice-President of the Society, made a patriotic address.

The Field Day of 1907 took place at Quincy, September 14. About 150 ladies and gentleman composed the party which assembled at Quincy Adams station where they were welcomed by Rev. Daniel Munro Wilson of Northfield, who formerly was of Quincy, and is recognized as its historian. Under his leadership the party visited the birthplaces of John Adams and John Quincy Adams, and there heard from Mr. Wilson much regarding the history of these ancient landmarks. Next was a visit to Penn's Hill and the Abigail Adams Cairn, erected by patriotic societies, June 17, 1896, to mark the spot where Mrs. Adams and her little son, John Quincy, watched the smoke of the battle of Bunker Hill.

Continuing the pilgrimage by trolleys to Quincy Centre, the historic old First Church, dating from 1639, was visited. Under this old-time place of worship are the tombs of John and Abigail Adams, and also John Quincy and Louisa Catherine Adams. Memorial tablets in their honor are in the church. The ancient burying ground, with its graves of Henry Adams, of the various Quincys, Rev. John Hancock, Joanna Hoar and other distinguished persons, formed a part of the pilgrimage. Then the party went to the Quincy mansion, better known as the "Dorothy Q. House." The house dates from 1636 and is a remarkably fine type of colonial architecture. The party then took electrics for Squantum by special invitation of Mrs. Nelson V. Titus. For this occasion a large marquée tent was erected on a hill overlooking upper Boston Harbor, and here dinner was served; after which the company rambled about Squantum, and then took the cars for Boston.

September 13, 1907. President Darling recommended that the Board of Managers suggest to the War Department naming the new fort on Deer Island for Colonel Richard Gridley, who was highly commended by Washington for his engineering ability.

November 8, 1907. The Board of Managers voted an appropriation of $250 for the preservation of the historic Royal House in Medford.

November 8, 1907. At this meeting, held for the purpose of petitioning for a Charter, the subscribers to the Agreement of Incorporation, under the General Laws of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, adopted as the By-Laws for the Society those already in force; no change being made excepting the dates of expiration of terms of office of the Managers to correspond with the dates of those who already are in office.

December 13, 1907. At a meeting of the Board of Managers a letter from Dr. Francis H. Brown was read in which he called the attention of the Board to the action of the City Council in passing an order to change the name of historic old North Square to Scigliano Square. It was voted to protest against making such change of names, and resolutions were adopted and sent to the Mayor of Boston praying that the name of North Square may be retained to remind our people of famous men and events of the past.

Charles F. Read reported that the portrait of James Otis has been returned from the Jamestown Exposition and acknowledged the receipt of it by the Bostonian Society as a loan from the Massachusetts Society. The thanks of the Board of Managers were given to Luther Atwood of Lynn, for his successful efforts to increase the membership of Old Essex Chapter of which he is Secretary.

At the meeting of the Board of Managers, January 10, 1908, the following Resolve on the death of Captain A. A. Folsom, who died December 24, 1907, was unanimously adopted by a rising vote:

Albert Alonzo Folsom, who died in Brookline, Mass., December 24, 1907, becoming a member of the Society in 1895, serving on various committees and the Board of Managers from 1902 to 1905, was ever actively interested in the purposes and welfare of the Society, and was a constant attendant at its meetings.

The Board of Managers deeply regretting that his long and inspiring life has come to a close, vote that this tribute to Captain Folsom, offered by Mr. Charles F. Read, be spread upon the Records of the Society, and that a copy be sent to his family.

February 14, 1908: Voted that the same committee appointed to place a tablet on the site of Franklin's printing office be authorized to procure a tablet to be placed on the Old South Meeting House.

Voted to send circulars of information, describing the marker for graves of soldiers of the Revolutionary War, to all town-officials in the State who had not already taken action in their towns to procure such markers.

Washington's Birthday, February 22, 1908

The Massachusetts Society of the Sons of the American Revolution held one of the most largely attended meetings in its history to celebrate the birthday of Washington, and listened to addresses of the most patriotic and inspiring character. General Charles K. Darling, the President, occupied the chair.

In the early morning the members assembled at the State House and attended the reception given by Governor Guild, from which they proceeded directly to Hotel Vendome to the number of over 200, completely filling the double reception room in the west wing.

Rev. Dr. Frederick E. Emrich, Secretary of the Massachusetts Congregational Home Missionary Society, a son of German parents, was the orator of the occasion and his subject: "What Can the Sons of the American Revolution do for the Pilgrims of the Twentieth Century?" He pictured the foundation and growth of the American Nation from the landing of the earliest Pilgrims, all under the influence, inspiration, lofty ambition, enterprise and incessant perseverance and stern resolve of the Pilgrims from foreign shores, who had come hither to establish homes where they could enjoy untrammeled freedom in religion, government, education and social and domestic life.

The descendants of these, and those who have followed them from the same native lands, were represented as those who have developed the national life of this country, become professors in its universities, leaders in science, constructors of commerce, have built up its industries, managed and supported its financial institutions, become foremost in art and literature, and, more than all else, had become our hewers of wood and drawers of water, constructed our railroads, canals, streets and buildings—as did in years long gone the immigrants from England and other countries across the water.

Taking the example of the Poles, against whom there was so much prejudice, and against whom many Americans would raise the barriers of entrance and citizenship still higher, he mentioned the names of Paderewski, Adamowski and Sembrich in music, and Kosciusko and others in patriotism, valor and statesmanship, with Mme. Curie, the discoverer of radium and Kossuth, as examples of the Hungarian possibility, Garibaldi, Mazzini and Dante among the Italians, and many others of races upon whom Americans are apt to look down.

But the people of these lands look across to America's shores as the land of Washington, where their own hopes lie, and to which they hope to come for freedom in religion, education and all that goes to make American civilization.

Dr. Emrich dwelt particularly upon the reverence which foreign-born people of America have for the name of Washington, illustrating by the fact that in the morning, before he came to the meeting, he had seen among his treasured relics an engraving of George Washington, which was one of the first purchases of his father when he came to America.

Speaking of the South American republics, one of which had raised and dedicated a statue of Washington beside that of Bolivar, he said that the people of the United States would never come to a full understanding of those of the southern hemisphere, in their zigzag but constant advance, until they began to realize how much the latter were influenced and imbued with the spirit of Washington and his compatriots.

It was not the descendants of the Puritans alone, he said, to whom the country was indebted for the preservation of the union. It was the men who fought under Siegel and Shields and Kearney and Sheridan, and others like them, of foreign lineage, who saved the country.

"The anti-slavery movement," he said, "would never have been a success under the old 'Know-Nothing' craze. It triumphed only when the foreigners came and laid down their lives to perpetuate that which your fathers laid down their lives to establish.

"The worst thing you can do is to call children of foreign birth or lineage, 'Paddy,' 'Dutchy,' 'Dago,' or to set that example to your own children. They used to call me 'Dutchy,' until I was actually ashamed of being a German. You must not do anything to make these children of recent foreign lineage ashamed of their parentage or of their country.

"It so happened that I was born a Protestant, and therefore I am a Protestant. But religion does not enter into the problem. The social and moral life of the people is not made by ministers, like me, but by the poets and the prose writers, like Walt Whitman and Dickens.

"I glory in what these people are doing over yonder (pointing toward the Back Bay region, and referring to the new enterprise of Boston college). I would extend the domain of education in every possible way.

"I was walking about at Copp's Hill recently and met a little Hebrew boy, and got into conversation with him. That boy could tell me more about Copp's Hill than I ever knew before. He had learned it in our public schools.

"I would put on the walls of our schoolhouses the pictures of Kossuth, Lafayette and other great men of foreign lands from whence many of the pupils come, so as to make them happy, for thus they will become more sincere American patriots, for they will be no less Americans because they love the memory of their own lands; the spirit of loyalty to their own parentage will make them reverence more the American people.

"In other states they are just beginning to open night schools for the benefit of immigrants and their children, but thank God Massachusetts has many such schools, in which thousands of men and women, as well as children, are learning the English language and the American system of government, citizenship and civilization.

"There is nothing better for the Sons of the American Revolution to do than to help in opening the door, trusting to our Heavenly Father, who is able to work all things for good, and will.

"Sons of the American Revolution—Be true to the traditions of the past—that America has liberty for all in its system of education, a standard of true religion, and a reverence for God, man and democracy."

General-Secretary George W. Mehaffy of the Boston Young Men's Christian Association explained the purposes of the North American Civic League for Immigrants, and Rev. Lewis W. Hicks and Pelham W. Ames, President of the California Society, S. A. R., also spoke. Vernon A. Field of Chelsea gave humorous recitations.

April 10, 1908. The Board of Managers unanimously voted their thanks to General Charles K. Darling who has so ably filled the position of President of the Society the past year, and expressed their sincere regrets that he declined a reëlection. A similar vote of thanks was given to Vice-President Hon. Arthur H. Wellman.

Annual Meeting, April 20, 1908

The Nineteenth Annual meeting was held in the Old South Meeting House, Boston, at 10 o'clock A. M.

President Charles K. Darling presided and Hon. Nelson A. McClary of Chicago, President General of the National Society, S. A. R., was the guest of honor, and in behalf of the National Society, extended its greetings. The invocation was delivered by Rev. Lewis W. Hicks, Chaplain.

The National and Society flags were then brought in by veterans of the Civil War and were saluted by the members who arose as they were presented.

President Darling, in his address, said that while "Old Home Week" had been somewhat discredited he felt that the work that was done by the patriotic societies at that time was satisfactory and in every way commendable.

The Secretary and Registrar, Herbert W. Kimball, reported the total membership as 1609, of whom twelve are sons of soldiers of the Revolutionary War.

Treasurer Charles M. Green, M.D., presented his sixteenth annual report showing the finances of the Society to be in an excellent condition.

The Auditors reported the accounts correct with a cash balance on hand, April 15, 1908, of $345.70. The Permanent Fund amounted to $5402; and the Reserve Fund, $1618.43.

Historian Charles F. Read read the Necrology giving names and brief biographies of several of the forty-three members who had died the past year. Henry A. May reported that more than 200 markers had been sold to be placed at graves of soldiers of the Revolution since the last report was made.

A resolution expressing the sympathy of the Society for Governor Curtis Guild, Jr., in his illness was adopted by a unanimous rising vote.

A resolution of sympathy for the sufferers by the Chelsea fire was offered by Alfonso S. Harris, and was unanimously adopted.

These Delegates were elected and attended the National Society's Congress held at Buffalo, N. Y., April 30 and May 1, 1908:

President Edward C. Battis; Moses G. Parker, M.D.; Charles B. Holman; Samuel W. Richardson; John G. Moseley; T. Julien Silsby; Herbert W. Kimball; Walter K. Watkins; Waldo E. Boardman, D.M.D.; Webster Bruce; William B. Holmes; David Pingree; Frank Rumrill; Albert T. Amee; Arra F. Clark; J. H. Gilmore, Jr.

On motion of Arthur E. Pearson it was voted to empower the Board of Managers to make such supplementary appropriation as may be found necessary to complete the required sum to build the Massachusetts "Bay" in the "Cloister of the Colonies" of the Washington Memorial Chapel at Valley Forge.

It was voted inexpedient to substitute the use of the Australian ballot system for election of officers when more than one candidate receives a nomination for the same office.

On motion of Hon. Levi S. Gould the thanks of the Society were given to President Darling, and all other officials who had served the Society the past year.

These officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, Hon. Edward C. Battis, of Salem; Vice-Presidents, John H. Manning, of Pittsfield, Luke S. Stowe, of Springfield, and Alfonso S. Harris, of Brookline; Secretary and Registrar, Herbert W. Kimball, of Waban; Treasurer, Charles M. Green, M.D., of Boston; Historian, Charles F. Read, of Brookline; Chaplain, Rev. Lewis W. Hicks, of Wellesley; Managers for three years, William J. Howes, of Holyoke; D. L. V. Moffett of Boston; Abner K. Pratt, of Newton; Colonel Philip Reade, of Lowell and Colonel Ephraim Stearns, of Waltham.

At the annual dinner of the Society, at the American House, retiring President Darling presided and opened the exercises by introducing James Faxon of Salem, and Arra F. Clark of Boston, sons of soldiers of the Revolution.

President General McClary spoke of the significance of April 19. The speaker said that members of the societies must be recognized by what they did rather than by the people from whom they were descended. There was a great educational work to be done, and that work was in connection with the vast immigration of foreigners to our shores.

These people, he remarked, came from northern Europe, Great Britain, Scandinavia and other countries; from every country where the population was congested and the people were in any way oppressed. A large percentage of these people could neither read nor write. Some of them came from Russia, Italy and Hungary. Many of them were densely ignorant, and had not our point of view at all.

"Many of these men and women whom it was undesirable to have here, are excluded by the government," he said, "and on this line, as well as on many others the general government was doing excellent work. During the past year the national society has taken up this work, and has published, with government assistance, a little booklet designed to show these people what they ought to know about this country. It has already been printed in several foreign languages, and it is the purpose to have it printed in fourteen languages for distribution among these immigrants."

"Nationality" was the theme of Colonel J. H. Benton, who said that when England assumed to make the colonies pay taxes, they arose, and objected to taxation without representation. At that time they were divided, and it did not seem that any power could bring them together. Then came the Revolution which made them independent, but that was very far from making a nation out of these different and dissimilar colonies, among whom there was no common interest.

"The spirit of nationality," he said, "was born out of the War of 1812, and was exemplified by Jackson's toast 'The Federal Union! It must, and shall be preserved.' The Civil War was a war not to put down slavery, but to preserve the Union; it was the spirit of nationality, the instinct of a great people for the preservation of their flag and their country."

As to the matter of immigration the speaker had no fears, for we were 80,000,000, practically 90,000,000, of people, and wherever one went from the East to the West, from the North to the South, it would be found in the ultimate analysis that the government of this country was in the hands of the Sons of the American Revolution. The people that came here could be assimilated.

If harm comes to the republic, it was not to be apprehended from the immigrants from Russia, northern Europe, or from any other land, but it was to be apprehended from the men who did not think it was a good thing to take part in politics.

At the close of his speech Colonel Benton was vigorously applauded.

Charles D. Burrage, President of the Massachusetts Society of Sons of the Revolution was the next speaker. He told of the friendly feeling which exists as it should between two societies working along similar lines, and on behalf of the sister society tendered his congratulations to the Sons of the American Revolution upon their successful meeting. President-elect Judge Edward C. Battis was then introduced and closed the meeting with a brief address thanking the members for the honor conferred upon him.

May 8, 1908. The following Standing Committees were appointed. On membership: The President, the Secretary and the Historian; On Finance, Alfonso S. Harris, John H. Manning and Vernon A. Field; On Publications and Printing: Luther Atwood, Horace S. Bacon and Luke S. Stowe. Special Committee on Memorials: Calvin Lord, Abner K. Pratt and Alfonso S. Harris.

June 12, 1908. President Battis stated that he had made a protest in the name of the Society to the City Council of Boston against changing the name of historic Maverick Square, East Boston, to Doherty Square, and on motion of Mr. Harris it was voted to send to the Mayor of Boston a letter respectfully protesting against changing the name of Maverick Square.

October 9, 1908. The Board of Managers appointed President Battis and Messrs. Harris, Pratt and Lord a committee to hire and furnish a suitable room for the exclusive use of the Society.

The following Resolve was voted: That the proposed amendment to the laws of the National Society of the Sons of the American Revolution, touching the organization and management of Chapters, is not favored by this Board, as, in its opinion, the organization and management of Chapters, under State Societies, should rest solely with each state necessarily governed by its own particular circumstances, needs and territorial conditions.

Anniversary of Burgoyne's Surrender, October 17, 1908

In place of a Field Day this year, which had to be omitted because of the lateness of the season, the Managers voted to celebrate the joint anniversaries of the surrender of Burgoyne, October 17, 1777, and Cornwallis, October 19, 1781, by a dinner at the American House. President Battis presided and Rev. Frederick W. Hamilton, D.D., President of Tufts College, delivered a scholarly address of historical interest in which he reviewed the causes which led up to the Revolution. He thought the war was based on two issues, political on the one hand and military on the other. Dr.

Hamilton incidentally stated that Washington was the greatest general of his time, excepting Frederick the Great. He also thought the American historians had given too much prominence to the Tory sentiment in this country at the time of the Revolution. He was inclined to give it less importance. The military problem presented by the war was to drive the British out of North America or at least from what is now the United States. The British were not so powerfully supplied with troops as one might think, having at the beginning of the struggle garrisons at only a few points, such as Boston, Halifax, Quebec, and the Ohio Valley, and a few distant points, including Florida.

Dr. Hamilton described Burgoyne's invasion of the Hudson Valley, and declared that it failed because other British generals at various points did not support him and because Washington saw through his plan and blocked him. This was the turning point in the Revolution.

Nathan Warren made a brief address describing the presentation of sham battles on "Cornwallis Day" in Waltham sixty years ago. He was in favor of keeping this anniversary each year by a Field Day, or some other equally good celebration.

The exercises closed with readings by Edwin Day Sibley which were much enjoyed.

November 13, 1908. The Society having hired a room at No. 17 Milk St., Boston, the Board of Managers met there this day for the first time.

Brigadier-General Philip Reade, U. S. Army (retired) submitted an autobiographical form to be printed and sent to each member of the Society requesting that it be filled out and returned to the Secretary. Subsequently the form was approved by the Board, and it was voted that it be sent to each member of the Society.

Mr. Calvin Lord introduced a Resolve, which was adopted and a copy was sent to the Secretary of War, petitioning that Fort McHenry, Baltimore, Md., should be permanently maintained as a garrisoned post of the United States Army.

It will be recalled that the resistance of the garrison of Fort McHenry during the bombardment of that fortification on the thirteenth and fourteenth of September, 1814, by the British fleet gave the theme to Francis Scott Key's poem, now adopted as the National anthem, the "Star Spangled Banner."

January 8, 1909. The thanks of the managers were given to Dr. Francis H. Brown for four volumes of the New Hampshire

State Papers, containing the Revolutionary Rolls; also, thanks were given Hon. William Olin, Secretary of State for the 17th volume of "Massachusetts Soldiers and Sailors of the Revolutionary War" thus completing this important work; also, Mr. Calvin Lord received the Manager's thanks for a copy of the Year Book of the General Society of the War of 1812.

February 12, 1909. This being the 100th birthday of Abraham Lincoln the Board of Managers made it an occasion for appropriate addresses which were given by Mr. Alfonso S. Harris, Rev. Lewis W. Hicks, General Philip Reade and Mr. Luther Atwood.

Secretary Kimball stated that he had attended the hearing given by the Committee on Federal Relations of the Massachusetts State Senate upon the Resolution relative to Rolls of Revolutionary Regiments and Companies and to Statements regarding Revolutionary Pensioners in the Pension Office, Washington, D. C.

"These Pension papers frequently contain items as to descendants, dates, names of places, and special services, that can be found nowhere else, and the completion of the work and subsequent publication by the Government is a matter of the greatest importance to all Societies based on Revolutionary ancestry." Mr. Kimball stated that the Government was making slow progress in the work of carding the papers and recommended that members of our Society use their influence with our Senators and Representatives in Congress to employ sufficient clerical force to complete the summary cards of the Revolutionary papers at an early date.

February 22, 1909. The Board of Managers having accepted an invitation from the George Washington Chapter of Springfield to celebrate with them Washington's birthday the members of the State Society were invited to attend a banquet in that city instead of holding the customary meeting in Boston. An excellent dinner was served at Forbes and Wallace's Café followed by addresses by Mr. John C. Robinson, Vice-President of the Chapter; Hon. Edward C. Battis, President of the State Society; Hon. Alfred S. Roe of Worcester; Rev. John S. Lyon, D.D., of Holyoke; Hon. Solon W. Stevens of Lowell and John Adams, our "own son" of the Revolution. The Committee in charge was Mr. Henry A. Field, Hon. Luke S. Stowe and Mr. Charles Van Vlack.

March 12, 1909. The Board of Managers voted to buy of the Connecticut Historical Society copies of "Connecticut Men in the Revolution," and "Connecticut Men in the Civil War."

The Committee appointed to procure tablets to mark the site of Franklin's printing office, and for the Old South Meeting House, reported that under the conditions imposed by the authorities in both places they recommended abandoning the project, and the Committee was discharged.

It was voted to register the Insignia and Rosette of the Society in the office of the Secretary of State.

The thanks of the Board were given to Historian Charles F. Read, and to Managers George M. Rice and Hon. Isaac N. Nutter for their valuable services during their terms of office, now closing.

Annual Meeting, April 19, 1909

The Twentieth annual meeting was held in the Old South Meeting House at 10.30 o'clock, A. M. President Edward C. Battis presided and the meeting was opened with prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. Lewis W. Hicks. President Battis welcomed the members and congratulated them on the excellent showings made by the Society during the year, and touched on the question of the Society's action in assisting in the building of the Memorial "Bay" at Valley Forge.

The Annual Reports of the Secretary and Registrar, the Treasurer, the Historian and the Auditors were read by those officials. Secretary Kimball reported the membership to be 1,635, of whom 128 had been admitted during the year. Treasurer Green reported that the total receipts had been $3,681.34, the expenditures $3,076.50 and that the cash balance on hand April 16 was $450.54. The Auditors found the accounts to be correct, and that the Permanent Fund, amounting to $5,906, is on deposit in approved Savings Banks; and that the Reserve Fund, on deposit, amounted to $2,148.64. Historian Charles F. Read read the Necrology for the past year, giving biographical notices of twenty-eight members who had died.

The Society, by a large majority, voted to appropriate about $950, to make up the deficiency in the amount required to build the Massachusetts Bay in the "Cloister of the Colonies" of the Washington Memorial Chapel at Valley Forge.

These Delegates were elected and attended the Congress of the National Society held in Baltimore, April 30 and May 1, 1909: President, Edward C. Battis, Delegate at Large, Dr. Moses Greeley Parker; Major H. P. Williams; John G. Moseley; David Pingree; Nathaniel F. Hunt; Jonathan E. Hayward; Frank Rumrill; Albert

F. Amee; T. Julien Silsby; Francis H. Brown, M.D.; Webster Bruce; David Floyd; Waldo E. Boardman, D.M.D.; William C. Briggs; Charles A. Harvey; Albert H. Stearns; Jerome C. Hosmer; Henry P. Oakman; Henry P. Kittredge; and Herbert W. Kimball.

The officers elected for the ensuing year were, with the exception of the Historian, who declined re-election, the same as for the previous year. Brigadier-General Philip Reade, U. S. Army, retired, was elected Historian, and the vacancy on the Board of Managers for his term expiring in 1911, was filled by the election of Charles B. Hitchcock of Springfield. The five new Managers elected for the three years' term were Frank A. Gardner, M.D., of Salem; G. Sidney Macfarlane of Lynn, Charles H. Preston of Danvers, Edwin D. Sibley of Somerville and Hon. Solon W. Stevens of Lowell.

Annual Dinner, April 19, 1909

At the annual dinner at the American House, Hon. Edward C. Battis, President, occupied the chair, and some 200 members were present.

Judge Morris B. Beardsley of Bridgeport, Conn., brought the greetings of the Connecticut society. He urged a movement to increase the membership of the organization all over the land, and spoke of the good work to be accomplished by such organizations, especially in the direction of aiding people who come here to live with wrong ideas as to our form of government, and who could be informed as to our institutions. He wanted the Society increased in membership, and in usefulness, and wanted it to share fully in the prosperity of the country.

Rev. Dr. Peter H. Goldsmith of Salem referred interestingly to the part the South took in the beginning of the Revolutionary struggle. He called attention to the fact that it was Jefferson who said it was important that the colonies should come to an understanding, and said that to Massachusetts and Virginia belonged the honor of beginning the great struggle that ended in the separation of the colonies from the mother country.

When the time for assistance came South Carolina exceeded all the other colonies in her contributions to aid Massachusetts. It was at that time, too, that Washington appeared among the contributors, and this contribution was followed with an offer to raise 1000 men for the aid of Boston.

It was a singular fact, he said, that when the outlook in the South was most discouraging, it improved from the very moment that General Nathaniel Greene of Rhode Island took command in that section, just as it improved in the North, when Washington, a Southerner, took command here.

The battle of Charleston served as tonic to the whole South, just as Concord and Lexington served to the North, for it was there that the Americans realized for the first time that the British redcoats were not invincible.

Hon. Allen T. Treadway, President of the Senate, referred to the fact that preparation was made for just such an emergency as was presented at Lexington and Concord, and that the men who had fought were inspired by a spirit of patriotism, the spirit that was shown by the Green Mountain boys, when they crossed over, and in the name of the Great Jehovah, demanded the surrender of Ticonderoga.

Patriotism must be shown in days of peace as well as in days of war, and it was incumbent upon all present as good citizens to pass upon matters of public concern like the city charter, the proposed consolidation of the two boards of education, and the great railroad problem. It was fair that the voters should have an opportunity to pass upon these great questions, and to show their preferences.

No state had a finer public school system than Massachusetts, he said. Commissions on industrial education had been appointed, and the state was now ready to adopt an industrial system.

In the western part of the state the people were interested in the ownership of the trolleys, and felt that a change would be made that would give them further railway development. The business of that section of the state did not warrant putting in another railroad, as some had proposed, but when the fares were used as a contributing factor, then both corporations can be profitable.

"We feel that we need better transportation facilities and that we can get them only in this way."

Brigadier-General Philip Reade, U. S. A., retired, read an interesting paper on "The Royalist Soldiers' Side of It," and, beginning with General Gage and Lord Howe, followed the royalist side from the beginning at Concord and Lexington, to the surrender of Burgoyne. He gave an interesting view of the struggle, and was listened to with the closest attention.

Charles Dana Burrage, President of the Massachusetts Society, Sons of the Revolution, was the last speaker.

This closed the formal speaking, and the members separated after a day of unusual enjoyment.

June 11, 1909. At the meeting of the Board of Managers the following Resolve on the death of Vice-President John H. Manning of Pittsfield, who died June 2, 1909, was adopted by a rising vote:

"Resolved: That in the death of John Henry Manning, the Massachusetts Society of the Sons of the American Revolution, loses one whose interest in the purposes and prosperity of our organization was most pronounced; whose counsels were highly valued, and whose presence among us was ever a source of inspiration and pleasure. We mourn his loss and extend our expressions of sympathy to his bereaved family."

September 10, 1909. The Board of Managers adopted the following Resolve on the death of Rev. Edward Everett Hale, D.D., who died June 10, 1909:

"Resolved: That we extend to the Society of the Sons of the Revolution of Massachusetts our profound sympathy over the loss of their revered compatriot, the Reverend Edward Everett Hale, D.D., who brought so great honor to his native land by a long life devoted to the interests of humanity, and whom the nation and beyond, mourns as for a personal friend. We also express our deep sympathy over the loss recently sustained by the Sons of the Revolution in the death of their Chaplain, Rev. Edward H. Rudd, whose life and deeds were so eminently true to the traditions of our honored ancestry and to the Society which he faithfully served as an officer."

Field Day at Salem, Mass., September 25, 1909

The Annual Field Day of the Society was held in Salem and was one of unusual interest besides being one of the most successful ever held by the Society. The members, including many ladies, were received at the Young Men's Christian Association rooms by Dr. Frank A. Gardner, President of Old Salem Chapter, S. A. R. The features of the day were the dedication of a bronze tablet to the memory of Captain Jonathan Haraden, a Revolutionary naval commander, the decoration of his grave in the Broad Street Cemetery and the paying of deserved tributes to his memory by prominent speakers at a banquet in Ames Memorial Hall. After the reception the members were escorted by President Edward C. Battis, and Dr. Gardner, with a color guard from the Second Corps of Cadets, to the cemetery where, at Captain Haraden's grave, a flag and a laurel wreath were placed, and Rev. Lewis W. Hicks offered prayer, the color guard presented arms, and the colors were lowered while "Taps" were sounded by a cornetist.

After the forenoon had been spent in sight-seeing, the company gathered at the building, 299 Essex Street, in which Captain Haraden lived during the latter years of his life, and on which the bronze tablet had been placed. President Battis gave the tablet in charge of Old Salem Chapter, and President Gardner accepted it on behalf of the Chapter. As the tablet was unveiled the color guard presented arms, the colors were waved and three rousing cheers were given. The company then returned to the Y. M. C. A. building where a banquet was served, during which the Cadet orchestra played National and Patriotic selections.

After the dinner President Battis extended a cordial welcome to all, gave a brief history of Old Salem Chapter and its work, spoke of the day, recalled the military history of Salem, and expressed the hope that the tablet on the old home of Captain Haraden would serve as an inspiration to all who read it, and who are to follow the present generation. After a brief address of welcome Dr. Gardner said in part:

"The annals of the war for the Independence of America contain the names of many heroes of note who rose from private life to places of marked eminence in the service of their country. Very few of these had a more successful career in the naval service than Captain Jonathan Haraden. His record on the sea was certainly remarkable and it is said he captured nearly 1000 cannon from the British during the war."

Addresses were made by William C. Greene, President of the Rhode Island Society, S. A. R.; General Philip Reade, and Rev. Howard F. Hill, President of the New Hampshire Society, S. A. R.

The exercises closed by the company uniting in singing one verse of "America."

Washington's Birthday, February 22, 1910

The Society celebrated the 178th Birthday of George Washington at Hotel Vendome, Boston, at 10.30 o'clock A. M. Notwithstanding the snow storm which prevailed outside, the attendance at the meeting numbered about 200. Preceding the exercises President Battis and General Philip Reade gave a reception to the guests and members of the Society. President Battis extended a welcome to the members and their friends and then introduced Colonel Thomas Wentworth Higginson who read a paper relating to the personality of Washington. He was followed by Rev. Henry Bedinger of Salem who spoke most interestingly of the South in the Revolution, particularly about General Daniel Morgan and his Virginia riflemen. Charles F. Read read a paper on Washington's visits to Boston, and Edwin Day Sibley gave some original "character studies."

An added interest was given the celebration at the business meeting, which preceded a collation, by a strong resolution in answer to recent criticisms of the character of Samuel Adams, the patriot, an early tax collector of Boston, which were adopted amid great applause, and the Society officially refuted this imputation on his character in resolutions which were presented by Mr. Walter Kendall Watkins.

Annual Meeting, April 19, 1910

The Massachusetts Society of the Sons of the American Revolution held its twenty-first annual business meeting on Patriots' Day in the Old South Meeting House, the usual place of gathering, with excellent attendance. The retiring president, Judge Edward C. Battis of Salem, presided. An interesting ceremony early in the proceedings was the trooping of the colors by a detail from troop A of the first squadron of cavalry, the National Lancers, in command of Captain John S. Barrows, president of Boston Chapter, S. A. R.

The meeting opened with prayer by the Society's chaplain, Rev. Lewis Wilder Hicks of Wellesley. President Battis gave a résumé of the work of the Society and spoke also of future purposes and aims.

The report of the Secretary-Registrar, Herbert Wood Kimball, showed some interesting facts. There was a total membership on April 1, 1909, of 1635, since which there have been added eighty-two new members; three persons have transferred their membership from other States, and nine former members have been reinstated, a total addition of ninety-four. The losses in membership were forty-three deaths, sixteen resignations, four transfers to other States, and twenty-eight were dropped for non-payment of dues, a total of ninety-one.

Of the present members, eight are "Actual Sons" of soldiers of the Revolution, viz: John Adams of Gardner, now in his ninety-sixth year; Albert Barnes of Kearsarge, N. H., in his ninety-second year; William B. Barron of Westminister, ninety; Elisha J. Faxon of Salem, seventy-eight; Elisha Gifford of Worcester, seventy-seven; George Mitchell of Groveland, ninety; Henry R. Reynolds of Dorchester, eighty; Cyrus S. Rockwell of West Bangor, N. Y., seventy-two. The latter is probably the youngest surviving son of a Revolutionary soldier in the United States. It has been an eventful year, the Secretary said, and the members may well feel that some good patriotic work has been done. The Society has placed many markers in the Boston cemeteries, and has contributed several markers for other locations, but there are yet many unmarked graves in Boston and its vicinity.

Dr. Charles M. Green, the Treasurer, reported that the receipts during the year just ended had been $5428, and the expenditures $5101. The total assets of the Society are $8233, made up of a permanent fund $6218, a reserve fund, $1689 and cash balance, April 15th, $326. Brigadier-General Reade of Lowell, Historian of the Society, read his annual report.

Walter Kendall Watkins of Malden offered resolutions declaring that a recently published statement, accusing John Hancock of being a smuggler, was a wilful distortion, showing careless ignorance of facts. His resolutions were adopted by a unanimous vote.

A resolution, offered by Whitfield L. Tuck of Winchester, favoring the bill for the raising of the battleship Maine from Havana harbor, was applauded. Another resolution offered by Captain John S. Barrows, opposing the use of the United States flag for any advertisement, or permitting it to be used as a symbol or mark of any kind, except under legal authority, was unanimously adopted.

After the business meeting the Society went in a body to the American House, where the annual dinner was served. Several distinguished guests and speakers honored the occasion, including Hon. Morris B. Beardsley of Bridgeport, Conn., President General of the National Society, Sons of the American Revolution. Mr. Beardsley said he wished to bring about a closer affiliation with the sister Society, the Daughters of the American Revolution, and to promote a better organization of the National Society as a whole, to encourage the founding of more chapters, and to increase the number of young members. "It is for us," he said, "in whom flows the blood of the Revolutionary fathers, to lead the way in this wave of reform, which I believe is going to sweep over the whole country."

Rev. E. A. Horton spoke of patriotism in its relation to politics, and said that what is needed now is that same spirit of eternal vigilance and love of justice with which the men of the Revolution were filled.

Rev. George L. Parker of Salem spoke on "Liberty at Home and Abroad," and pointed out the lessons which Americans may learn from the restrictions with which liberty lovers have to compete in foreign countries. General Reade spoke interestingly of the battle of Lexington in its historical aspect and threw new light on this event of so long ago. C. Bertrand Thompson made his subject "Efficient Patriotism," and solicited the help of the Society in the work to put Boston again in the lead among the cities of the United States.

D. Chauncey Brewer, President of the North American Civic League for Immigrants, outlined the movement which led up to the coming of the Puritans and referred briefly to the characteristics of the men who made the stand at Concord and Lexington. Edwin S. Crandon spoke a few words in behalf of the new President, Nathan Warren, who was unable to be present.

The election of officers resulted as follows: President, Nathan Warren of Waltham; Vice-Presidents, Edwin Sanford Crandon of Cambridge, Luke Stearns Stowe of Springfield, and Luther Atwood of Lynn; Secretary-Registrar, Herbert Wood Kimball of Waban; Treasurer, Dr. Charles Montraville Green of Boston; Historian, Brigadier-General Philip Reade of Lowell; Chaplain, Rev. Lewis Wilder Hicks of Wellesley; Board of Managers for three years, Alvin Richards Bailey of Newton, John Stuart Barrows of Boston, William Williams Bartlet of Roxbury, David Floyd of Winthrop and Wilford Jacob Litchfield of Southbridge. For one year to fill unexpired terms, Philip T. Nickerson of Boston and Charles O. Bachelor of Worcester.

Memorial Tablet to Jonathan Smith

A memorial tablet to Jonathan Smith, a hero of the Revolution, whose calm and sensible speech carried the convention in Boston in 1787 for the ratification by the State of the Federal Constitution was unveiled in Lanesboro, Mass., on the afternoon of August 20, 1908 in the presence of a distinguished company of State officials and Berkshire County citizens. Lieutenant-Governor Eben S. Draper, former Attorney-General Herbert Parker, Mrs. John M. Stevenson, regent of Peace Party Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution and Judge Charles E. Burke were the principal speakers.

The placing of a tablet to perpetuate the memory of Jonathan Smith originated with the Berkshire County Chapter of the Massachusetts Society of the Sons of the American Revolution. The Chapter was represented by its President, Judge Edward T. Slocum of Pittsfield and the Berkshire Bar Association by Judge Charles E. Burke. The State Society, the Berkshire County Bar Association,

The Peace Party Chapter D. A. R., and others, co-operated with the Berkshire County Chapter in contributing to the memorial fund.

The bowlder on which the bronze tablet was placed was brought from Frederick G. Crane's farm in Dalton, and the inscription on the tablet was written by President Charles W. Eliot of Harvard University.

The presiding officer at the exercises was E. M. Whiting, chairman of the Lanesboro selectmen. The Rev. Charles J. Palmer of Lanesboro offered prayer and the Cresent Quartette of Pittsfield sang the "Battle Hymn of the Republic." Lieutenant-Governor Eben S. Draper delivered the opening address, and the tablet was unveiled by Master Wolcott H. Treat of Lanesboro, one of the indirect descendants of Jonathan Smith, who died childless.

The Dedicatory address was made by former Attorney-General Herbert Parker of Boston, who said in part: Our own national existence came into being in no remote past, to be transmitted to us only by mythical tradition, or the half fabulous tales, or poem or saga, whence the history of the ancient race or nations of men took its source. Happy in the vivid living memory of the founders of our republic and commonwealth, let it be the care of our piety and patriotism to reverently hold in heart and thought, those who were, of our own flesh and blood, in truth, fathers of our nation, as of our people, nor let them recede into the mists of mythology or deification, as the years pass, and the memory of their services and achievements grows dim in the security of our inheritance which they have given to us hallowed by a father's hope, and blessed by a mother's sacrifice and love.

Nor again, transported by filial gratitude in contemplation of the heroism of our ancestors, let us not forget that they were men, possessing no attributes of divinity which we may not hopefully and reverently emulate.

Let us recognize the attainments of their courage in battle, their wisdom in council, their faith in God, their achievements and their victories, conscious that they were no demi-gods, but men with all the frailties and weaknesses which man has inherited, subject to the same conflict between self-interest and duty, sensitive to the same suffering and knowing every sorrow, oppressed by every fear, moved by every affection that make up the compelling impulses of our own lives.

Nor let us imagine that the winning of our liberty, the establishment of our government, the security of our jurisprudence and the administration of our law, came to their accomplishment through any sudden or miraculous revelation of valor or genius of any one soldier or patriot, or that either found immediate consummation. No revolution in human affairs, political, religious or intellectual is wrought out as by an instant dispensation or accomplished except through prolonged struggle, retrogressing, again advancing through the development of character, the persistent endurance of resolute and determined men, who yield to no discouragement, and who move others to like effort with them through the contagion of their own courage, faith and enthusiasm.

Let us then look about this scene so familiar to him, to commemorate whose services we are here assembled. Let us strive to return in thought to the conditions of his day. Let us look upon Jonathan Smith of Lanesboro in his own environment, emerging from the clouds which so long obscured the hope of an American nation. Let us look upon him as he was courageously facing the gloomy forecasts of the future, almost without hope for his country, for he had seen some of his own neighbors rushing with a riotous mob to the overthrow of the Courts, and the seizure of the very weapons upon which the state must depend for her defence against alien enemies. He had heard the lawfully constituted representatives of the people maligned for no other reason than that they refused to make legal by statute a base attempt to repudiate honest debts. He had heard the riotous outcries of an excited populace at Worcester and Springfield. He had seen the guns of the patriots of Lexington, of Bennington and Yorktown turned against the officers of the law, and the militia of the state, as vengefully as when they were discharged against the redcoats of Howe, or the hirelings of Hessian principalities.

Adams and Otis, who with unerring sagacity led the colonists through the critical period of controversy and correspondence with royal governors and ministers, and Captain John Parker on the Lexington Green, Warren who gave his life at Bunker Hill, are enshrined forever in the Nation's heart, yet they rendered no more essential service to the birth and life of our united country than did they who in hours of less glorious environment gave invaluable aid in making that union possible. The framers of the Federal Constitution who wrought out and formulated its immortal mandates and safeguards, would have labored in vain, and that great charter of liberty and law would have become the subject only of the admiring and curious study of scholar and philosopher of a later day, had it not been accepted, ratified and given vital being through the deliberate and voluntary action of the several states of the Confederacy whose people at first looked upon it with avowed opposition and hostility.

The darkest hours of our national life were not those of Valley Forge, or the retreat from Fort Lee, or the storming of Fort Washington, but rather of those years when the confederation of states had proven a futile, feeble shadow of government without power or substance. Discredited abroad, the new democracy of America excited no sentiment but that of contempt of the European powers, who waited, or secretly or openly conspired, for the dissolution of even the pretence of an American nation, expecting to appropriate its dismembered parts as their own ambition or arms should dictate.

Mutual jealousies and suspicion at home, and the animosities and conflicting interests of the several states every year growing more implacable, had left nothing to be hoped from the confederation. Fisher Ames truly declared in the Massachusetts Convention that it was necessary "now to unite or die we must."

In this crisis, in such desperate issue upon this final test of the capacity of the American people to voluntarily establish and maintain a national government, Jonathan Smith had a share that gave him sure title to the everlasting gratitude and honor of the Republic, and has left his name to be held in special veneration here, where he lived, and where his ashes lie beneath a modest stone, which tells nothing of his service to his country.

"Constitution Hill" will declare to coming generations the national event which its name commemorates, and now for all time, so long as this hill shall lift its brow to the returning sun, so long as bronze shall last, Jonathan Smith and the establishment of the Federal Constitution shall live together in inseparable fame.

To the patriotic spirit of the Berkshire County Chapter of the Sons of the American Revolution this community and the Commonwealth are indebted for the memorial tablet this day dedicated from which may be read the lesson of the service and character of this plain Berkshire patriot, type of the rugged virtues and strength of the New England yeoman.

Mrs. Stevenson's Address

Mrs. John M. Stevenson, regent of Peace Party Chapter, D. A. R., made the following brief address:—

It gives the Peace Party Chapter great pleasure that they have been allowed to have even a small share in the erection of this beautiful monument to the memory of Mr. Jonathan Smith.

It is wonderful what little things will give a clew to a man's character. We know from the time and occasion of Mr. Smith's speech, that he was a man not influenced by others; that he thought for himself; that he was given to enthusiasm on any subject he made his own, and that he was a man of character sufficient to influence others.

Berkshire County has been particularly rich in patriots and it would add greatly to the interest in this section of our state and its history, were all its patriots and its notable events suitably commemorated, and it is a source of satisfaction that a beginning has already been made.

The beautiful monument to the friends of our fathers, the Stockbridge Indians, has long been standing in the town of that name, also the Chimes erected by David Dudley Field, a former citizen of that town, were placed on the site of the old Mission Church for the Indians. Some years ago the old Indian fort on the Housatonic river at Great Barrington was marked by a bowlder, a monument has been erected in Lenox to Major-General Patterson, who was present at the battle of Lexington and the siege of Boston and was one of the most influential men this country has ever had. Pittsfield has a monument to an officer of the civil war, Brigadier-General Henry S. Briggs; nor can I close without mention of the beautiful elm tree planted so many years ago at Blackinton by Prof. Perry, that casts its shade over the site of old Fort Massachusetts.

It is impossible to pass those monuments without some thought of their origin. It is an uplift and an encouragement to recall the noble lives of patriotic men, their struggles, and the uncertainty perhaps of their aims, and their final victory, so similar to the struggles of the human heart of today. To the Sons of the American Revolution who have worked with so much energy to secure the erection of this monument, to a man not their kin, in a town not their own, we owe our thanks and congratulations. They have shown an appreciation of Mr. Jonathan Smith's service to his country. They have themselves been inspired by the same breadth of view, the same enthusiasm that was an inspiration to Jonathan Smith more than a century ago.

JUDGE CHARLES E. BURKE'S ADDRESS

The Berkshire Bar appreciates the great and noble work the Society of the Sons of the American Revolution is doing in searching out and marking those spots about us of historic interest, and in erecting suitable memorials to the memory of such men as have influenced our political development.

It is thankful for the opportunity of paying, on this occasion, a very brief tribute to the man who in those dark days of doubt and distrust could divest himself of the prejudices that surrounded him, and with convictions welling from his heart, lift up his voice with such effect in behalf of the work of men who belonged to those classes particularly hated and distrusted by the farmers of Western Massachusetts.

While we have met here to consecrate to him, in the presence of these everlasting hills, this monument, let no one think that the obligation owed to Jonathan Smith is thus discharged, for the debt of gratitude is not ours alone of Berkshire of Massachusetts, but of the whole nation.

The extent and magnitude of that debt we can realize only when we consider that undoubtedly on the action of the Massachusetts Convention hung, as in a balance, the fate of the Constitution; and that there were in the minds of his fellow-farmer members those prejudices against the Constitution which no art could dispel and which the greatest forensic talent of the convention had not reached.

With unerring intuition Jonathan Smith sensed the situation and with an ability at which we cannot but marvel, in his brief speech met and dispelled those prejudices, and it is said, enlisting by his speech the support of Samuel Adams, the ratification of the Constitution followed.

The American people are not ungrateful, though slow, at times, to awaken to an appreciation of a benefaction. Let us trust that sometime, in some way, a national recognition of Jonathan Smith's service will be made. Meanwhile we shall point with pride to this monument and tell that as citizens of Berkshire County and of the Commonwealth, we have done something to remind our descendants of one to whom their gratitude is due for the blessings of a great, free and enlightened nation.

To perpetuate the memory of Jonathan Smith for what he did to save the constitution in this state the town of Lanesboro named "Constitution Hill" after him.

The time between the recognition of the independence of the United States in 1783, and their adoption of the Federal Constitution five years later, was a critical one in American history.

This period was one of depression, anarchy, and, in Massachusetts to some extent, of civil war, by what is known as the "Shays' Rebellion." This rebellion was a sort of uprising in opposition to the courts, and the lawyers. The people were poor, they had no money with which to pay debts, and they suffered hardship from precepts issued by the courts, obtained, of course, through the instrumentality of members of the legal profession. The mass of people were farmers, and they united in hatred of the lawyers and as the Federal Constitution was known to have been the work of great lawyers like James Madison and Alexander Hamilton, many of the farmers, probably a majority, opposed the ratification of what they characterized "a lawyer's government."

"That a farmer from the little town of Lanesboro was intelligent and broad-minded enough to rise above this prejudice of men of his vocation and deliver a speech in favor of ratification, a speech which probably turned the scale into a doubtful convention, is an event that entitles the author of that speech to the gratitude of every American citizen, and especially to the respect, and gratitude of the men of our profession," says the Berkshire Bar Association in resolutions indorsing the movement to erect a tablet to Jonathan Smith.

Smith's Great Speech

"Mr. President: I am a plain man, and get my living by the plow. I am not used to speaking in public, but I beg your leave to say a few words to my brother plow-joggers in this house. I have lived in a part of the country where I have known the worth of good government by the want of it."

After reviewing prevalent disorders, the speaker said:

"Now, Mr. President, when I saw this Constitution I found that it was a cure for these disorders. It was just such a thing as we wanted. I got a copy of it and read it over and over. I had been a member of the Convention to form our own State Constitution, and had learned something of the checks and balances of power, and I found them all here. I did not go to any lawyer and ask his opinion; we have no lawyer in our town, and we do well enough without. I formed my own opinion, and was pleased with the Constitution.

"I don't think worse of the Constitution because lawyers and men of learning and moneyed men are fond of it. I don't suspect that they want to get into Congress and abuse their power. I am not of such jealous make. They that are honest men themselves are not apt to suspect other people. I don't know why our constituents have not as good a right to be jealous of us as we seem to be of the Congress, and I think those gentlemen who are so very suspicious that as soon as a man gets into power he turns rogue, had better look at home.

"Some men think that our liberty and property are not safe in the hands of the moneyed men and men of learning. I am not of that mind, brother farmers; let us suppose a case now. Suppose you had a farm of fifty acres and your title was disputed, and there was a farm of 5000 acres joined to yours that belonged to a man of learning and his title was involved in the same difficulty; would not you be glad to have him for your friend, rather than stand alone in the dispute?

"Well, the case is the same; these lawyers, these moneyed men, these men of learning, are all embarked in the same cause with us, and we must all swim or sink together, and shall we throw the Constitution overboard because it does not please us alike? Suppose two or three of you had been at pains to break up a piece of rough land, and sow it with wheat, would you let it lie waste because you could not agree what sort of a fence to make?

"Would it not be better to put up a fence that did not please everyone's fancy, rather than not fence it at all, or keep disputing about it until the wild beasts came in and devoured it? Some gentlemen say: 'don't be in a hurry, take time to consider and don't take a leap in the dark.' I say take things in time, gather fruit when it is ripe.

"There is a time to sow and a time to reap. We sowed our seed when we sent men to the Federal Convention; now is the harvest; now is the time to reap the fruit of our labor, and if we don't do it now I am afraid we never shall have another opportunity."

Of the result of this vote Washington wrote Knox: "This victory, though won by a small majority, has dampened the hopes of the anti-federalists in the seven other states which have not yet ratified the constitution, and they are filled with disappointment and chagrin. Nothing less than sound sense, good reasoning, moderation and temper of the supporters of the measure could have carried the question. It will be very influential on the equivocal states!"

Webster said: "Of all the men I have known, his speech was the most characterized by sound sense, correct principles and a correct judgment as to public affairs."

The exercises closed with the singing of "America" by the quartet. At the close of the program the ladies of Lanesboro generously served refreshments.

GENERAL INFORMATION

AND

MATTERS OF HISTORICAL INTEREST

SEAL

The Seal of the National Society is one and seven-eighths of an inch in diameter, and consists of the figure of a minute-man standing by the side of a plough, surrounded by thirteen stars; the whole encircled by a band three-eighths of an inch wide, upon which in raised letters is the name of the Society, with the date of organization. That of the State Society is identical with that of the National Society, except that within the name of the parent society is the motto "Massachusetts Society, organized April 19, 1889."

INSIGNIA

The Badge—Obverse: A gold cross of four arms and eight points, of the same size as the Chevalier's Cross of the French Legion of Honor, with white enamelled arms. In the centre is a gold medallion bust of George Washington in profile, surrounded by a ribbon in blue enamel, on which is the motto of the Society in gold letters, "Libertas et Patria." Between the medallion and the points of the cross is a laurel wreath. Reverse: Like the obverse; the medallion, however, has the figure of a minute-man, surrounded by a ribbon in blue enamel, containing in gold letters the words, "Sons of the American Revolution." The cross is surrounded by an eagle in gold, suspended by a silk ribbon of blue, white, and buff.

The cross is a reproduction of the emblem of the French Order of St. Louis, with certain changes, and was adopted to commemorate the assistance given to the Colonies by Louis XVI, Grand Master of that Order. The medallion, containing the head of Washington and the figure of the minute-man, is fitly placed upon a cross of such an origin and associations.

The Rosette—The rosette is a button in the shape of a raised cup, of blue, white, and buff ribbon. It is to be worn in the upper left-hand button-hole of the coat.

The only badge now authorized by the National Congress is that described above, superseding all forms previously used. The price of the badge, or cross of St. Louis, adapted to this Society, is nine dollars. It may be obtained of Messrs. J. E. Caldwell & Co., Philadelphia, by permit issued by the Registrar-General, which will be furnished by the Registrar. The rosette may be procured of the Registrar for twenty-five cents.

THE OFFICIAL MARKER

The subject of identifying and marking the graves of Revolutionary soldiers and sailors has for some time engaged the attention of the Massachusetts Society of the Sons of the American Revolution.

The General Court of Massachusetts, by an act passed in 1884, authorized towns to appropriate money for the purpose of erecting headstones or other monuments to the memory of the patriot dead.

The design adopted by the Massachusetts Society follows the insignia badge of the Society, having the letters S. A. R. (Soldier American Revolution) on three of the arms, and the figures 1775 on the fourth arm of the cross. More than eight thousand five hundred markers have been made and used throughout this and other States, and even in our distant possessions and in foreign lands. A list of soldiers and sailors whose graves have been designated was printed in connection with the Society's Year Books of 1901 and 1904.

The Massachusetts Society, while retaining the design of the marker as originally made of iron, has now entirely changed its material and mode of manufacture. The cross has been slightly reduced in size, and is made of good bronze. It is securely fastened to a brass rod, and this rod, with the cross, makes its entire length about thirty-seven inches. If desired, the end of the rod having an anchor may be set in cement, which is to be buried eighteen inches below the surface of the ground. This anchor will render the marker, when once adjusted, almost immovable; and, with the bronze and brass of which it is composed, the whole will last for many years. The National Congress, at its session in 1894, adopted the design for its official marker, and recommended its use by all the State Societies. At the session of 1903 the changes suggested by the Massachusetts Society were approved.

Full information for procuring the markers may be obtained from the Registrar.

INFORMATION

MEMBERSHIP in this Society is strictly limited by the National and State Constitutions to such persons as can prove their descent from well-authenticated patriot Revolutionary ancestry. Collateral descent has at no time been allowed in this body by prescribed law or otherwise. Appropriate papers and all needed information for making application for admission will be furnished by the Registrar.

APPLICATIONS FOR MEMBERSHIP must be made out in duplicate; must be signed by the applicant on the second and fourth pages; must be sworn to before a justice or a notary; and returned to the Registrar with check for five dollars—which includes the admission fee and the first year's assessment. Biographical data should be given as fully as possible, and reference to authorities quoted. Care should be taken that all these requirements be carried out, as no imperfectly prepared papers can be received.

The Secretary of most of the States will make a search of the rolls and archives, and furnish an official certificate for a small sum. The Commissioner of Pensions at Washington will furnish a certificate, gratis, if the ancestor was a pensioner.

THE CERTIFICATE OF MEMBERSHIP issued by the National Society, handsomely engraved, and of size suitable for framing, will be furnished for the sum of one dollar in advance. Application to be made to the Registrar.

THE FRONTISPIECE

"THE BOSTON TEA PARTY"

From a painting by Darius Cobb

Owing to the persistent refusal of American merchants to import tea, the East India Company obtained an act of Parliament empowering it to export tea to America without paying duty to England. This would enable the Company to sell at such low rates that they thought the colonists would purchase even with the tax of threepence on the pound. When this news became known, all America was in a flame. The people were not to be duped by any such appeal to their cupidity.

They had taken their stand upon a principle and not until that was recognized would they withdraw their opposition. Nowhere was the feeling more intense on the subject than in Boston. Efforts failed to make the "tea commissioners" resign their appointment. Mass meetings were held in Faneuil Hall and the Old South meeting house where it was unanimously resolved, upon the motion of Samuel Adams, that the tea should be sent back, and that no duty should be paid on it. The tea-ship Dartmouth arrived first and was moored at Griffin's Wharf, near the foot of Pearl Street, and the other tea-ships, the Eleanor and the Beaver, were moored near by the Dartmouth. Under the revenue laws, the ships could not be cleared in Boston with the tea on board, nor could they be entered in England, and, moreover on the twentieth day from their arrival they would be liable to seizures. Whatever was done, therefore must be done soon.

The Patriot leaders were all sincerely anxious to have the tea returned to London peaceably, and they left nothing undone to accomplish this object. The owner of the Dartmouth said he had no power to send his ship back with the tea. Governor Hutchinson had taken measures to prevent her sailing and the Collector of the port refused a clearance unless her teas were discharged. Thursday, December 16, 1773, came at last and Boston calmly prepared to meet the issue. The people in and around the Old South meeting house formed the largest gathering ever seen in Boston. Addresses were made by Samuel Adams, Josiah Quincy, Jr., J. Rowe and others. "Who knows," said Rowe, "how tea will mingle with salt water?" a suggestion which was received with loud applause.

The owner of the vessel reported that the Governor would not give a pass because his vessel was not duly qualified. Samuel Adams arose and said, "This meeting can do nothing more to save the country." Instantly a shout was heard outside; the war-whoop resounded, and a band of forty or fifty men, disguised as Indians, rushed by the door down Milk Street to Griffin's Wharf, sprang aboard the tea-ships and emptied the contents of 342 chests of tea into the bay, without injury to any property or person. There was no confusion, no noisy riot, no infuriated mob.

The strange spectacle lasted about three hours, and then the people all went home and the town was as quiet as if nothing had happened.

"This is the most magnificent movement of all," said John Adams. "There is a dignity, a majesty, a sublimity, in this last effort of the Patriots that I greatly admire."

THE DEDICATION

OF THE

MASSACHUSETTS BAY

IN THE

"CLOISTER OF THE COLONIES"

JUNE 19, 1909

MASSACHUSETTS DAY AT VALLEY FORGE

The Massachusetts Bay in the "Cloister of the Colonies" was dedicated on Evacuation Day, June 19, 1909, in the presence of a large number of invited guests. The day was ideal and the wooded hills of Valley Forge were most beautiful, forming a fair setting for a ceremony which will long be remembered.

The procession was formed in the Parish House, the Rev. Thomas J. Garland, Secretary of the Diocese of Pennsylvania, acting as Master of Ceremonies. The following order was observed:

The Washington Chapel Choir.
The Girl Choir of All Saints' Church.
The Stephens Brass Quartette.
The Boy Choir of All Saints' Church.
The Visiting Clergy.
The Secretary of the Diocese of Pennsylvania.
The Dean of the Convocation of Norristown and the former Dean.
The President of the Standing Committee of the Diocese of Pennsylvania.
The President of the Massachusetts Society, Sons of the American Revolution.
The Chairman of the Dedication Committee.
The Orator of the Day.
The Dedication Committee.
The Representatives of other Societies.

The Members of the Massachusetts Society, Sons of the American Revolution.

Leaving the Parish House the procession passed along the front of the Chapel and the Cloister and those who formed it took position in the grove to the west of the Cloister. At the Virginia Bay those who were to take part in the dedication left the procession and entered the Cloister, going into the Massachusetts Bay.

Standing within this beautiful structure the Rev. Roberts Coles, Dean of the Convocation of Norristown, began the simple but impressive service of dedication, reading the 100th Psalm.

The Chairman of the Committee on Dedication and the Historian of the Massachusetts Society, Mr. Charles French Read, was then introduced by the Rev. Mr. Burk. Mr. Read formally transferred the Bay to the President of the Society the Hon. Edward Clarence Battis, in the following speech:

ADDRESS BY MR. CHARLES FRENCH READ

Rev. Dr. Perry, Rev. Mr. Burk, Compatriots, Ladies and Gentlemen:

A goodly number of us, officers and members of the Massachusetts Society, Sons of the American Revolution, have journeyed hither to be present today at the dedication of the Massachusetts Bay in the Cloister of the Colonies of the Washington Memorial Chapel at Valley Forge.

We have come from the "Bay State," in which in 1761, to quote the words of ex-President John Adams, spoken in his declining years, "Then and there was the first scene of the first act of opposition to the arbitrary claims of Great Britain. Then and there the child Independence was born" to the great "Keystone State" in which in 1776 the Declaration of Independence, the Magna Charta of our Liberties, was formulated and given to the world.

We have come from the homeland of Samuel Adams, the Father of the Revolution, of James Otis, who, until his withdrawal from public life, was the co-worker of Adams in events which led to the Revolution, and of John Hancock, whose well-known signature was the first to be inscribed on the Declaration of Independence. And we have come from the birthplace of Benjamin Franklin, the Boston printer boy, who became in mature life the philosopher, statesman and signer of the Declaration of Independence. He was the most eminent citizen of his time of yonder city of Philadelphia and his mortal remains now rest in the embrace of its soil.

What shall I say, in a few words of Valley Forge? The name and all that it implies is as familiar to us of Massachusetts as the names of Lexington and Bunker Hill are to you of Pennsylvania. Indeed the name of Valley Forge is familiar to the entire nation and even to the present day it is the constant theme of the orator, poet and writer who recognize in it one of the important episodes of the Revolution. To me personally the name is of deep interest, for one of my three great grandfathers, who served in the Revolution, passed the winter of 1777-1778 here at Valley Forge as an officer of the Massachusetts Line.

Mr. President, in conclusion, I have the honor, as Chairman of the Valley Forge Committee of the Massachusetts Society, Sons of the American Revolution, to place in your hands, to be transmitted by you to the Episcopal Diocese of Pennsylvania, this Massachusetts Bay which has been erected by the contributions of our Society. May the Washington Chapel, of which this bay forms a part, be speedily carried to completion and long endure as a memorial to him whom the entire nation delights to honor as the "Father of his Country" and of the brave officers and soldiers of the Revolution who encamped with him here at Valley Forge.

The President of the Massachusetts Society accepted the Massachusetts Bay in the name of the Society and then presented it to the Rev. James De Wolf Perry, D.D., President of the Standing Committee of the Diocese of Pennsylvania, who represented the Diocese on this occasion by the appointment of the Bishop.

President Battis in making the presentation said:

ADDRESS BY THE HONORABLE EDWARD CLARENCE BATTIS

Reverend Sirs, Compatriots and Friends:

Mr. Chairman:—As President of the Massachusetts Society, Sons of the American Revolution, I congratulate you upon the completion of the task assigned to you,—the termination of a work well and successfully accomplished.

I extend to you, and to your associates, the thanks of our Society.

And now to you, sir, Rev. Dr. Perry, as Chairman of the Standing Committee of the Episcopal Diocese of the State of Pennsylvania, I deliver over into your keeping this structure or Bay, in the Cloister of the Colonies, the gift of the Massachusetts Society, Sons of the American Revolution, it being a part of the beautiful edifice designed as a memorial to the blessed memory of Washington.

Accept it, sir, and bear with it the sentiments that we this day dedicate to the memory of the soldiers of our old Commonwealth who were encamped on this spot during a period of the War of the American Revolution.

And we place upon it the offering of a heartfelt love and veneration for those whose belief in a just and righteous cause prompted them to endure for Liberty's sake, the manifold privations and sufferings encountered here.

There is a pathos in the scene,—
A people's hope, the lives of men,—
All that a country staked for Liberty and Right,
Did here await His will.
The darkness and the gloom, the biting frost,
The trials of nature to oppress the human frame,
Though courage blotted out the doubt
And anxious reason held the balance well,—
Supreme above them all the master mind,
Intent upon the purpose destined to fulfil,—
His mighty spirit, steadfast in that trust sublime
To God the Father in that hour of need,
The prayers of him who led His children on,—
Brought forth a nation unto victory.

The Rev. Dr. Perry accepted the Massachusetts Bay on behalf of the Diocese of Pennsylvania and in doing so said:

ADDRESS BY THE REVEREND JAMES DE WOLF PERRY, D.D.

This occasion, which brings together on historic ground representatives from the state of Massachusetts and people of Pennsylvania, suggests comparisons and contrasts with a past, when such a meeting for such a purpose as that which has called us here would not have been possible. In that earlier time, the people of Massachusetts colony drove out into the wilderness the non-conforming Quakers, and so harassed Prayer Book Churchmen that they were glad to recross the ocean for refuge in their mother country and their mother Church. Since that childhood of our nation, we have attained both growth and knowledge and have passed through many changes in both state and church. In both these relations unity has been strengthened and cemented by sharing both trials and triumphs. Having one country and one Christian hope, we, whose "citizenship is in heaven," should be earnest and united in discharging duties of citizenship on earth. Encouraging omen and earnest of such unity was given, when, in a doubtful and dark time of early struggles for independence, light and guidance were asked from "the Father of Lights." When in the Continental Congress, assembled in Carpenter's Hall, it was proposed to open the sessions with prayer, an objection was made that it would be difficult and embarrassing to introduce such a practice into an assembly of persons who held divergent religious opinions.

Samuel Adams, who has been fitly called "The Father of American Independence," rose in his place and earnestly favored the proposal and said: "Gentlemen, shall it be said that it is possible that there can be any religious differences which will prevent men from crying to that God who alone can save them? Puritan as I am, I move that the Rev. Dr. Duche, minister of Christ Church in this city, be asked to open this Congress with prayer." Another Congressman from Massachusetts, John Adams, writing to his wife of that act of worship, said: "Never can I forget that scene. There were twenty Quakers standing by my side and we were all bathed in tears."

Another incident in our early history serves to measure the progress which we have made. When, in the year 1824, the Legislature of Massachusetts was asked to grant a charter for a Foreign Missionary Society, a distinguished Senator solemnly protested against granting the charter, because the society which petitioned for it was formed for the purpose of exporting religion, and there was no religion to be spared for this purpose, it was all needed here at home. We have learned and are yet learning that by exporting religion we increase its quantity and improve its quality, that there are things which, in being bestowed, enlarge and enrich, being twice blessed, blessing both them that give and them that take. So let it be with the gift of this beautiful Memorial Bay, which from you, Mr. President, and from the Massachusetts Society, Sons of the American Revolution, of which you are President, I, in the name of the Diocese of Pennsylvania and of the Trustees of this Diocese, who will hold in trust your gift, gratefully receive it. May it bring and bind more closely our States together in that Union which is symbolized in this sacred structure and which appears to be designed by God to permanently bless both the people of America and all nations of the earth.

At the close of Doctor Perry's address, President Battis read the inscription of dedication, which is carved in the structural stone of the Bay, as follows:

THE INSCRIPTION

TO THE GLORY OF GOD
IN HONOR OF THEIR ANCESTORS
AND IN LASTING MEMORY
OF THE
SOLDIERS OF MASSACHUSETTS
ENCAMPED AT VALLEY FORGE DURING
THE WINTER OF 1777–1778,
THIS BAY IS ERECTED BY THE MASSACHUSETTS SOCIETY,
SONS OF THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION,
1909

Dean Coles then continued the service of dedication appointed for the occasion, and the service at the Bay concluded with the singing of "America."

Singing the processional hymn:

"O Lord of Hosts! Almighty King!
Behold the sacrifice we bring:"

the procession entered the Cloister by the Virginia Bay and passing through the Pennsylvania and New Jersey Bays marched into the Chapel, followed by the congregation. The clergy and choirs occupied the sanctuary, choir and seats in front of the perclose, while the members of the Massachusetts Society sat in the "Pews of the Patriots."

The Rev. Mr. Burk introduced the orator of the day, the Reverend Chaplain of the Society, whose masterly address was as follows:

ADDRESS BY THE REVEREND LEWIS WILDER HICKS, A.M.

The Soldier of the American Revolution at His Best at Valley Forge

In the book from which the precepts of our holy religion are drawn it is declared, "Better is he that ruleth his spirit than he that taketh a city," the form of which declaration may be somewhat changed without changing its essential meaning, to read, That soldier is at his best, not when, under excitement, he rushes into battle and wrests victory from the enemy; but when, for weary weeks and months, he patiently submits to discipline and privation in the camp, while waiting for the call to arms. As thus interpreted the proverb suggests our subject, viz: The Soldier of the American Revolution at his Best at Valley Forge.

In Abbott Hall, in the old town of Marblehead, Massachusetts, there is a painting entitled "The Spirit of '76." Three figures occupy the centre of the picture: an old man with flowing, snowy locks, with eye on fire and figure erect, is keeping animated step to the sound of his drum, which he is beating with all the energy which he can summon. On his left is a middle-aged man with a handkerchief tied about his wounded forehead, who is fifing with all the force that he can put into his magic instrument and keeping step with the aged drummer at his right. On the other side of the central figure is a youthful drummer, whose eager gaze is directed to the old man's face, as if he were getting inspiration and support from the aged hero's determined spirit. Behind these striking figures is seen the flag; following which is a column of patriots, who are evidently marching on with the same spirit of energy and elation that marks their leaders. Still another figure, at the extreme right lower corner of the picture, is that of a wounded soldier, who, as he lies by the broken wheel of a cannon, is enthusiastically waving his cap, as the others go by to meet the enemy. That picture is a faithful representation of the war spirit of the soldiers of the American Revolution. Youth, middle age and old age were alike animated by the spirit of patriotism. They chafed under the reign of injustice. They hailed the opportunity to meet the well-trained forces which represented their oppressors. Concord, Lexington and Bunker Hill testified to their fiery ardor. Ticonderoga, Saratoga and Bennington evinced their determination to stake their all in the service of their country. Trenton and Princeton witnessed to the fact that great obstacles were not regarded by them as necessary hindrances to success. King's Mountain, Cowpens and Guildford beheld wonders of courage that would have done credit to any force that ever appeared on a battle-field. And if we would recall the conduct of individual leaders, to show the martial spirit of the soldiery of the American Revolution, there would at once rush before the memory the names of Ethan Allen, John Stark, Anthony Wayne, Daniel Morgan and William Moultrie, not to mention others of equal bravery, a host of them, who dared to lead where any dared to follow; who led small bodies against larger ones; undisciplined forces against seasoned veterans; taking such chances that, but for the sacred object which they had in view, their conduct could have been justified on no ground whatever. The history of no people contains a list of names that more strikingly illustrates the martial spirit that is eager for action, that chafes when restrained from executing that which has been set before it as a worthy object of attainment. It was in view of such a spirit that Chatham, the English statesman, exclaimed "You cannot conquer America:" prophetic words, which found their verification in the surrender of Cornwallis at Yorktown, and in the subsequent acknowledgment of the independence of the United States by Great Britain, in 1783. The soldiers of the Revolution did prove themselves to be great in the field, great in the leadership which was accorded them, and great in the courage with which both officers and men faced such opposition as might well have dismayed an even more determined body of patriots, if such a body can be conceived of.

But, notwithstanding what has been said in praise of the war spirit of the soldier of the Revolution, I make bold to affirm that it was at Valley Forge, on the holy ground on, or near which, we are assembled, that he appears at his very best. In his History of the English People, John Richard Green says as much, when he writes: "The rout of his little army of men at Brandywine forced Washington to abandon Philadelphia, and after a bold but unsuccessful attack on his victors, to retire into winter quarters on the banks of the Schuylkill, where the unconquerable resolve with which he nerved his handful of beaten and half-starved troops to face Howe's army, in their camp at Valley Forge, is the noblest of his triumphs." Yes, it was the very noblest of his triumphs, because it was achieved not by force; not by the display of a tyrannical spirit; but rather by an exhibition of those qualities which stamp him as one of the greatest men of his, and every age, qualities which the English historian has well described as "heroic endurance, silence under difficulties, calmness in the hour of defeat, the patience with which he waited, and the lofty and serene sense of duty that never swerved from its task through resentment or jealousy;" qualities which we may well comprehend under the simple expression, "the rule over his own spirit," the mastery of that strong spirit that was ready for any danger, and that even coveted danger when the fitting time appeared for meeting it in behalf of his beloved country. It was, I say, through the exhibition of such qualities here at Valley Forge that he nerved his handful of beaten and half-starved troops. They saw him gain that greatest of all victories, the victory over self, and by the sight, through the splendid example of their trusted leader, themselves acquired that heroic endurance, patience and sense of duty which justifies us in saying that they were even greater in their conduct at Valley Forge than when they were gaining those victories over which the world has not yet ceased to wonder; which justifies us, indeed, in saying that here, where we are now assembled, the tide of American patriotism reached its very highest mark.

To bring this striking fact out into clearer light let us examine the conditions which obtained here huring the winter of 1777-1778; and let us do so by looking at them through the eyes of men who were actually on the ground during that trying period of American history. From the diary kept at Valley Forge by Surgeon Albigence Waldo, I quote what he wrote under date of December 14, 1777, as follows: "There comes a soldier, his bare feet are seen through his worn-out shoes, his legs nearly naked from the tattered remains of an only pair of stockings, his breeches not sufficient to cover his nakedness, his shirt hanging in strings, his hair dishevelled, his face meagre; his whole appearance pictures a person forsaken." This entry, which doubtless describes a more or less general condition in the camp, was made but three days before General Washington issued orders from headquarters, in which he says: "The Commander in Chief with the highest satisfaction, expresses his thanks to the officers and soldiers for the fortitude and patience with which they have sustained the fatigue of the campaign, although in some instances we unfortunately failed, yet upon the whole heaven hath smiled upon our arms, and crowned them with signal success. Every motive irresistibly urges, nay commands, to a firm and manly perseverance in our opposition to our cruel oppressors, to slight difficulties, endure hardships, and contemn every danger." Just think for a moment what these words of Washington imply. They mean that the spirit of the great leader has risen above defeat and discouragement to a point where his courage is equal to the most untoward conditions. And his unconquerable resolution to remain true to duty found a fitting response in the fealty of his soldiers. Nine days later than the issuance of Washington's general order, just quoted, Surgeon Waldo made this entry in his diary: "Why doesn't his Excellency rush in and take the city, in which he will doubtless find much plunder? Because he knows better than to leave his post and be catched like a fool cooped up in the city. He has always acted wisely hitherto. His conduct when closely scrutinized is uncensurable. . . . Many country gentlemen in the interior parts of the states, who get wrong information of the officers and state of our camp are very much surprised at General Washington's delay to drive off the enemy, being falsely informed that his army consists of double the number of the enemy's. Such wrong information serves not to keep up the spirit of the people, as they must be by and by undeceived to their no small disappointment; it brings blame to his Excellency, who is deserving of the greatest encomiums; it brings disgrace on the Continental troops, who have never evidenced the least backwardness in doing their duty, but, on the contrary, have cheerfully endured a long and fatiguing campaign." Thus is it evident that both the Commander and his troops were held to their duty by the loftiest spirit of self-sacrifice.

But fuller tests were to be applied to their loyalty than any that have as yet been adverted to. Hardships increased in the camp to a woful extent. From the fragment of a letter dated "Valley Forge, January 1, 1778," I make the following quotation: "Attend awhile to our lads perishing for clothing, twenty-six in one York regiment have been three weeks without a shirt; one-fourth of our men are barefoot, without blankets or breeches, now lying uncovered in the field; believe me, this is real, my eyes witness the direful truth." Yet the very letter from which this quotation is taken contains these brave words: "It would be unpardonable after such noble efforts and signal success to despond; or quit the service." The unknown author of that letter, whoever he was, whether an officer or a private, displays a quality of heroism even greater than he would have displayed had he written his brave words on the eve of an expected battle against a determined and overwhelming foe.

In view of his feeling, our natural pity for men under the circumstances under which he and his comrades were placed is changed to profound admiration. They were then greater than the captors of cities. One other quotation of a similar character to the last I would beg your indulgence for introducing, because it is from a letter that was penned January 5, 1778, at Valley Forge, by Colonel John Brooks, of Massachusetts, a man who was held in the very highest esteem by his compatriots, and to whom the Society of the Sons of the American Revolution has dedicated a tablet. Colonel Brooks writes: "For a week we have had snow, and as cold weather as I almost ever knew at home. To see our poor fellows living in tents, bare-footed, bare-legged, bare-breeched, etc., etc., in snow, in rain, on marches, in camp, and on duty without being able to supply their wants is really distressing. Under all these disadvantages no men ever shew more spirit or prudence than ours. In my opinion nothing but virtue has kept our army together through this campaign. There has been that great principle the Love of our country, which first called us into the field, and that only to influence us. It cannot be said that we are bought or bribed into the service.

> 'Do thou, great Liberty, inspire our souls
> And make our lives in thy possession happy,
> Or our deaths glorious in thy defence.' "

It would seem, in view of the conditions described in this letter of Colonel Brooks and of the spirit with which he represents the soldiers as enduring them, as if nothing higher could be attained in the way of human endurance, nothing higher in the discharge of difficult duty, than was actually attained by the officers and soldiers who from Massachusetts and the other colonies were encamped here during that severe winter of 1777-1778.

But we have not yet touched the matter that greatly aggravated the situation, that made endurance additionally hard, that made patience assume a sublime aspect, and that crowned that suffering army with the coronal of immortal honor. I refer to the fact that the sufferings already alluded to and the even more intense sufferings which followed, of which I forbear to speak, were believed to be, and really were, in a large measure avoidable. In a record concerning the straits to which the families of the officers were subjected, on account of a lack of the very necessities of life, and which led them to write appealing letters to their husbands at Valley Forge, beseeching them to resign their commissions and return to their homes, Surgeon Waldo has this to say: "What man is there who has the least regard for his family, whose soul would not shrink within him? Who would not be disheartened from persevering in the best of causes, the cause of his country, when such discouragements as these lay in his way, which his country might remedy if they would?" Another entry of like nature concludes as follows: "Strange that our country will not exert themselves for Washington's support and save so good a man from entertaining the least anxious thought about the officers' virtue and perseverance in supporting a cause of such unparalleled importance." In these entries reference is made, as you well know, to the indifference of Congress to the welfare of the men on whom the safety of the country so largely depended. That well-nigh disintegrated body was slow to respond to the urgent appeals of Washington for needed help; in one of which he says, "I feel abundantly for them," the soldiers, "and from my soul I pity those miseries, which it is neither in my power to relieve or prevent." And he writes again, "Naked and starving as they are, we cannot sufficiently admire the incomparable patience and fidelity of the soldiery." Under conditions as thus set forth it is not strange that numbers of officers resigned, and that not a few soldiers deserted; so that in February there were in the camp at Valley Forge only about five thousand effective men. Was it anything less than wonderful that so many remained to endure what must have seemed to them to be rank injustice on the part of the authorities, who should have been attentive to their needs? "Here we are," they could not have been blamed for saying, "here we are, separated from our loved ones, and undergoing such privations as we never endured under the government against which we have enlisted to fight, privations to which we are unnecessarily exposed on account of the indifference of those whose business it is to look after our needs. Against such injustice our hearts rebel. We are not called upon to endure it longer. We are justified in returning to our homes and families." Who could greatly blame them for reasoning after this manner?

But five thousand men endured it all, endured the cold, the nakedness, the hunger, the injustice, remained loyal to duty; to their great commander, to their country, and became the nucleus of that disciplined force which, one hundred and thirty-one years ago this very day, left their camp here at Valley Forge eleven thousand strong, to finish the great task which had been given them to do for their country and their God. Well has a Massachusetts historian written: "To have held on through that winter was a great feat, but to have built up and inspired the army at such a time was much more wonderful. It shows a greatness of character and a force of will rarer than military genius." Yes, to have held on, as Washington and his suffering army held on was a great feat: one that was possible only through the greatness of character and force of will of both the commander and the soldiers who were under him. Both ruled their own spirits under circumstances when to falter would have been well-nigh pardonable; but when to continue steadfast was the very acme of heroism. Heroes, those steadfast soldiers were; aye, and victors as well.

I love to think of this place where we are gathered today as a field where the greatest of all the victories of the American Revolution was won; where as many victories were won as there were men who remained true to their pledges of fidelity to their country; subduing whatever impulses they may have had to desert the cause, enduring privation, overlooking injustice and submitting at last to the rigid discipline enforced by Steuben, which prepared them for meeting the disciplined forces of Great Britain on fields of martial effort. I love to picture to myself a force of seasoned veterans marching forth on the nineteenth of June, 1778, under their commander, with a confidence that was inspired by a consciousness of having done their duty; of having gained such a mastery over themselves that they could not fail in their effort to conquer the enemies of their country. I love to think of Washington, who had borne with them the privations of the camp, as leading them forth with an air of justifiable pride, and with the most perfect assurance of future success on the field of arms. Men who had endured what they had suffered were good for any emergency. They could not fail of victory in the end. And they did not fail, as the whole world has come to know. The final victory was indeed deferred. But doubt respecting the ultimate issue had no place in the minds of those veterans who left Valley Forge one hundred and thirty-one years ago today. They turned their backs on one field of victory only to face other fields where more conspicuous, but no more honorable, victories awaited them.

Massachusetts, with the record made by her sons at Lexington, Concord and Bunker Hill, has reason to be more proud of none of her sons than of those soldiers of her eleven regiments who faithfully stood by the colors during that fateful winter at Valley Forge. The spirit shown in the writings of Colonel Brooks and Surgeon

Waldo,—the spirit that rose superior to adverse circumstance, that denied itself, that was unfalteringly loyal, that emerged from trial triumphant, is something that should be forever commemorated. If valor which has had but an hour to display itself is worthy of monumental recognition, how much more worthy to be remembered is that valor which holds out through weeks and months of privation and suffering. How eminently fitting, then, it was that the Massachusetts Society of the Sons of the American Revolution should embrace the opportunity that was graciously offered them to join with representatives from the other thirteen original states in paying honor here to her sons, and to the soldiers from the other colonies who, on this holy ground, proved of what stuff heroes are made; and who, by their fidelity to principle, made possible the independence of the United States. By erecting this Bay in the Cloister of the Colonies we would testify both to the heroism of those brave men and to the gratitude in which the old state of Massachusetts would forever enshrine their memory.

And we think it to be fitting that this memorial should have its place in connection with a building that has been set apart for the worship of the God of our fathers; because patriotism and religion must join hand in hand for the support of government, if it is to be permanent; and especially because here Washington sought the intervention of divine Providence, and here his prayers were answered in the coming of Baron Steuben, that efficient drill-master, and through other needed helps to final success.

And the feeling is generally entertained by our Society, the members of which are connected with various religious organizations, that our memorial could not be so fittingly incorporated in a building of any other order as in one belonging to that historic church of which General Washington was a devout and honored member.

Therefore, to the watchful guard and care of those who control this valuable property we gladly commit the Massachusetts Bay, with the earnest hope and prayer, that the Cloister of the Colonies may serve for all time as a memorial of virtue, and as an incentive to patriotic devotion; may indeed become a Mecca, to which our children and children's children may come, and from which they shall carry away high resolves to live lives of service for their country and their Maker.

The audience, which had followed the orator with the closest attention and with increasing enthusiasm broke into applause at the conclusion of the oration. Before announcing the offertory hymn the Rev. Mr. Burk in the name of the Massachusetts Society extended to all present a cordial invitation to the luncheon in the Parish House. He also invited those who had not seen Valley Forge to be the guests of the Society and its companions in a pilgrimage to the various points of interest. He then read the following telegram:

Denver, Colo.

Congratulations to the Massachusetts Society, Sons of the American Revolution, from the State Regent, New York Society, Daughters of the American Revolution.

Mrs. Joseph S. Wood.

Mr. Burk then said: "The Reverend Doctor Perry in accepting the Massachusetts Bay has voiced the gratitude of the Diocese of Pennsylvania, which has been honored by your sacred trust. I feel that I ought to thank you in the name of the congregation which I have the honor to represent and to whose immediate care this memorial is entrusted. I assure you Mr. President, we consider such a trust an honor, and you and the Society which you so ably represent may be confident that we will show our appreciation by our reverent care of the Massachusetts Bay. How others regard your gift is shown by the telegram just read, and I believe the day is not far distant when the "Cloister of the Colonies" will be completed. To that completion your patriotism will have contributed by inciting others to work toward the same noble purpose of having the troops of the American colonies fittingly commemorated at Valley Forge.

For the Committee which has worked so faithfully, so patiently and so persistently to carry out this purpose I have only words of praise and the assurance that with all its members I rejoice today at the happy consummation of their labors.

Will you pardon me if I add a more personal word? for this dedication of the Massachusetts Bay means much to me. For this day and for this hour I have longed and labored. I have dreamed of it; I have prayed for it.

By your generous patriotism the façade of the "Cloister of the Colonies" is completed, and in its completion you have been the first State Society to build a monument at Valley Forge. Upon this I congratulate you most heartily. Your deed will be the inspiration of others, and the day will surely come when there will be completed not only the "Cloister of the Colonies," but all that fair vision of Chapel and Patriots' Hall, "Porch of the Allies" and Thanksgiving Tower for whose realization I have toiled for the honor of our country and for the glory of our God. For your strong endorsement, for your cordial support, for your kindly encouragement and for your generous help in this work for Valley Forge I thank you, and through you, Sir, those whom you so ably represent, the Massachusetts Society, Sons of the American Revolution.

After the offering for the Building Fund of the Washington Memorial Chapel the service concluded with prayers by the Rev. Herbert J. Cook, D.D., one of the Trustees of the Chapel, and with the benediction pronounced by the Dean of the Convocation.

Before the luncheon was served the choirs, members of the Society and several of the clergy were grouped in front of the Massachusetts Bay for a photograph, which was most successfully made by Mr. Bussa, a photographer from Norristown.

The luncheon was served by the members of the Washington Chapel Guild, who acted as the hostesses of the occasion for the Massachusetts Society. The tempting luncheon was thoroughly enjoyed by all present, and the hospitality of the Society was appreciated by the guests, who numbered over three hundred.

The afternoon pilgrimage as conducted by the Rev. Mr. Burk was the culmination of a most enjoyable day. A complete tour of the encampment was made in coaches under his guidance, and at each important place he had something to tell of the men who made Valley Forge famous. The Valley Forge Park never looked as beautiful as it did on that occasion, and the visitors were enthusiastic in their praises of the splendid work done by the State of Pennsylvania through the Valley Forge Park Commission.

The site of the huts of the men of Massachusetts, which was on the commanding ridge where the Gulph Road crossed the encampment, was of the greatest interest to the visitors, the forefathers of several having spent the memorable winter there. Mr. Burk urged the members of the Society to secure from the State of Massachusetts some fitting monument to mark the spot. The Valley Forge Park Commission has placed a marker there with the data of the troops, but there should be a monument or statue of real artistic worth to worthily mark the place.

THE MASSACHUSETTS BAY

The Massachusetts Bay is the fifth from the Chapel and the nearest to the encampment. Its position at the corner of the Cloister makes it the last of the bays along the front and the first along the side. Like all the work at the Chapel it is built in the most substantial manner of Holmesburg granite. Indiana limestone is used for buttress caps, coping and tracery, and also for the lining. While in general the design of the tracery corresponds with that of the other bays it has a marked individuality. The floor is of Knoxville marble and in the centre is set a large bronze reproduction of the first seal of the Massachusetts Colony. The ceiling is of oak handsomely carved and on the central boss are carved the arms of the State of Massachusetts. These are properly colored and are in strong contrast with the dark woodwork of the ceiling.

Great praise is due to William M. Sullivan, of Norristown, who had the contract for the cut stone, and the other contractors for the expeditious manner in which the work was done and for the great care used in its execution. In addition to Mr. Sullivan the contractors were John Williams, Inc., New York, bronze seal; Wesley Sloan, Philadelphia, marble floor; G. Gerald Evans, Philadelphia, ceiling; Boyer and Evans, Norristown, masonry; H. C. Bainbridge, Norristown, carpenter work. The design was made by Milton B. Medary, Jr., of Philadelphia, the architect of the Chapel.

The Committee on Dedication, to whose efforts so much is due, consisted of the following:

Edward C. Battis, President; Charles F. Read, Chairman; The Rev. Lewis W. Hicks, Arthur E. Pearson, John M. Merriam, Herbert W. Kimball.

Massachusetts was well represented on this occasion, as the following made up the party which did honor to Massachusetts Day at Valley Forge: The Hon. Edward Clarence Battis, of Salem; Rev. and Mrs. Lewis Wilder Hicks of Wellesley; Dr. Charles M. Green of Boston; Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Read of Brookline; Mr. and Mrs. John M. ADDRESS OF THOMAS WENTWORTH HIGGINSON

FEB. 22, 1910

I thank you, Mr. Chairman, for calling on me to take part with you in this annual festival. It is quite convenient, for those who are getting on in years, that their early memories go back with them, and even go sometimes, their neighbors think, a little bit too often and too far. In the case of Washington, it is hardly so with me, as he died in 1799, about a quarter of a century before I was born; but I can at least remember some men who remembered him, a thing which most of you never did. I can recall, for instance, William Sullivan, who died in 1839, when I was in college; and Josiah Quincy, President of Harvard, who lived until 1864, and I remember each of these as vividly as one who has lived in these days might describe President Taft, whom I have not had the luck to see either, although I voted for him.

To Sullivan and Quincy, it appears, Washington carried the look of forest life and not at all of the drawing-room or even the battle-field. "His gait," writes Sullivan, "was that of a woodman and by no means that of a statesman or even a soldier;" and Quincy once described him to me as seeming like those country gentlemen who used, he said, to come down to Boston, not easy or graceful, perhaps, but strictly polite.

It was not thought until within a few years—not until Irving's "Life of Washington" appeared and then only till a small note at the bottom of a page in about the fourth volume revealed the fact that the Father of his country ever laughed. Neither Marshall, nor Eames, nor Bancroft, father or son, nor Ramsey, nor Paulding ever thought of admitting such a thing. Irving first let it be known, that in camp in Washington's earlier years a young officer once told a story so good that Washington not only laughed, but roared and not that only, but he fell on his back and rolled over and over, shouting with delight. Probably no one American ever did so much to give Washington perpetual popularity as Irving gave in those words. Six feet of Father of his country rolling over and over to digest an anecdote! Since then he has been nearer to us than we ever expected.

Nevertheless there was a genuine dignity in Washington and it is quite certain that the young French noblemen and others, who were more discriminating than an average Englishman as to manners, could testify to what we now recognize. The most impartial and penetrating of all these was the Marquis of Chastellux. He says of Washington: "The impression General Washington has left on my mind" is "the idea of a perfect whole—which cannot be the product of enthusiasm, but would rather reject it, since the effect of proportion is to diminish the idea of greatness. Brave without temerity, laborious without ambition, generous without prodigality, noble without pride, virtuous without severity—he seems always to have confined himself within those limits where the virtues . . . . may be mistaken for faults. This is the seventh year that he has commanded the army and that he has obeyed the Congress; more need not be said, especially in America."

Another Frenchman, Brissot, says of him, more guardedly, but not less emphatically: "This celebrated general is nothing more at present than a good farmer. His eye bespeaks great goodness of heart; manly sense marks all his answers, and he is sometimes animated in conversation; but he has no characteristic feelings which render it difficult to seize him." . . . . "His modesty is astonishing to a Frenchman."

We know that his receptions at home, or rather Mrs. Washington's, were reproached as "introductory to the pageantry of courts" but it was very modest pageantry. Nothing could have been less festive or more harmless than the hospitality of the Presidential abode.

An English manufacturer who was invited there to breakfast reports a meal of admirable simplicity—tea, coffee, sliced tongue, dry toast, and butter—"but no broiled fish, as is the general custom," he adds sadly. At an evening reception, Mrs. Washington offered her guests tea and coffee with plum cake; at nine she warned her visitors that the general kept early hours, and after this remark the guests had no choice but to do the same. At these entertainments of hers, the President was but a guest—without his sword—and found it necessary to retreat in good order at the word of command. His own personal receptions were for invited guests only, and took place every other week at just three P. M.

At these the President stood before the fireplace in full black velvet, with his hair powdered and gathered into a silk bag behind; he wore yellow gloves and silver knee buckles, with a steel-hilted sword in a white leather scabbard; he held in his hand a cocked hat with a feather. This is the description given by William Sullivan in his Familiar Letters on Public Characters.

If it was the object of Washington to make these occasions stiffer than the drawing-rooms of any crowned potentate, he succeeded. Names were announced, and the gentlemen formed a semi-circle; the President bowed, but never shook hands; he made the circuit, addressing a few words to each; then they bowed and retired.

It is hard to imagine that these mild entertainments could have been severely censured as extravagant or monarchical; perhaps one can better comprehend how the censure could be applied to the street equipage of the new President—the cream-colored carriage, painted in medallions, ornamented with cupids, and the liveries of white turned up with scarlet. The coach was drawn by six horses on great occasions, on ordinary occasions by four, and on Sunday by two. Yet this was, perhaps, more readily recognized as essential to the dignity of his station.

It was in the desire of promoting this dignity that the two Senators of the new nation were anxious to give the President an official title. The plan was said to have originated with John Adams, who believed "Splendor and Majesty" to be important in a republic; and there was a joint committee of Congress to consider the matter. This committee reported against it, but the dissatisfied Senate still favored a title, as it well might, at a time when the Senators themselves were habitually called "Most Honorable." They proposed to call the chief magistrate "His Highness the President of the United States of America and Protector of their Liberties." The House objected; the country at large was divided on the subject. Chief Justice McKean proposed "His Serene Highness;" somebody else suggested "The President-General;" and Governor Sullivan thought that "His Patriotic Majesty" would not be inappropriate, since he represented the majesty of the people. Washington, himself, it is said, favored "His High Mightiness" which was the phrase used by the Stadholder of Holland. It was the common-sense of the nation that swept these extravagances aside; it was one of the many occasions in American history when the truth of Talleyrand's saying has been vindicated, that "everybody knows more than anybody."

THE FAITH, THE FASHION AND THE FIREARMS OF OUR FOREBEARS

LEXINGTON AND CONCORD

Address by Brigadier-General Philip Reade, U. S. Army, Retired
Historian of the Society

At the Annual Dinner of the Massachusetts Society, Sons of the American Revolution, Boston, on "PATRIOTS' DAY,"—the one hundred and thirty-fifth anniversary of the Lexington fight and Concord battle.

IN MEMORIAM

"God of our fathers, known of old—
Land of our far-flung battle line—
Beneath whose awful hand we hold
Dominion over palm and pine—
Lord God of hosts, be with us yet,
Lest we forget—lest we forget!"

(Kipling's Recessional)

The nineteenth of April is an anniversary date not apt to be forgotten in this Commonwealth, which may God save! Apart from having been a day of "fasting and prayer" prior to the sixteenth of March, 1894, in Massachusetts, Patriots' Day also commemorates hostilities both with, and without, a declaration of war in The United States, viz: The firing upon Fort Sumter, S. C.; the attack, in Baltimore, Md., on the 6th Mass. Vols.; the declaration of war against Spain in 1898; and, finally, Washington's announcement on the nineteenth of April, 1783, of the cessation of hostilities between the United States and England.

King George III was not an Englishman. He was only third in descent from the autocratic elector of Hanover who wore unwillingly the English crown. All his racial interests, all his hereditary disposition led him to believe that obedience to a royal will was part of the eternal principles of earth and heaven. The stubborn colonists were largely men of the same blood, the same race, the same creed and speech as the English people. They were near kinsfolk, children of the same ancestor. The war that was about to be fought was a fratricidal war. It was to be Englishmen against Englishmen in the shock of civil strife. Chatham knew and preached this fact.

The foretalk of Lexington included the petition of the Philadelphia First Congress concerning Writs of Assistance, Stamp Acts, Tea Tax, Boston Port Bill, Regulating Acts. Then our Provincial Congress, Sons of Liberty, Alarm Lists, Committees of Correspondence, Safety and Supplies argued and plead and acted. John Adams and James Otis made their voices heard. Arbitration preceded armament. Boston furnished the cause, Lexington and Concord furnished the ground and Middlesex County furnished the men.

Including Captain Parker's Minute-men and Major Buttrick's original Companies, twenty-three towns, at least, took part in the fighting. They were:—Concord, Lexington, Danvers, Acton, Cambridge, Needham, Sudbury, Bedford, Woburn, Medford, Charlestown, Watertown, Framingham, Dedham, Stow, Roxbury, Brookline, Billerica, Chelmsford, Salem, Newton, Beverly and Lynn. Killed, 49; Wounded, 39; Missing, 5.

They knew their catechism, read the Bible, conned the Almanac, sang Watt's psalms and hymns. Emerson's Arithmetic, Quackenbush's Grammar, and Colburn's Mental Arithmetic and Greenleaf did not come until two generations later. Only yesterday, my mother, born in Lowell, September 21, 1814,—bade me give her blessing to you Compatriots and she sang for me the song her grandmother sang to her, viz:

"The British yoke, the Gallic chain was urged upon our necks in vain.
All haughty tyrants we disdain and shout 'Long live America.'"

Lexington was the battle of the Minute-men; the commencement of the War of the Revolution. The militia had been disciplined to meet it, expected to meet the conflict, had been warned that it was close at hand, hence the skirmish and subsequent running fight was not a mere impulse. The Lexington Alarm was the result of labor, not impromptu spurt.

"They with prophetic eye saw through the lurid sky the goal they sought.
They hailed the coming State, patient to toil and wait, suffered and bled."

"When daylight came there could be seen
At Lexington upon the green,
A little band of heroes true,
With hearts to dare and wills to do.

A varied throng in homespun clad,
With toil-marked hands and faces sad:
The youth with down upon his chin,
The sire with scanty locks and thin.

'Our lives and homes,' was the pledge they said,
'For the truth shall live when we are dead.'
Ours today is the first of lands,—
A royal gift from their rustic hands."

When Paul Revere's horse went clattering up the old Bedford road, now Hancock St., Lexington,—to the house of the Rev. Jonas Clark, to warn Samuel Adams and John Hancock that the British regulars under Lieutenant Colonel Smith and Major Pitcairn were coming to arrest them both for treason,—John Hancock fell to cleaning his gun, declaring that he would take part with the militia. Sam Adams,—the "Father of the Revolution,"—wise and far-seeing, laid a restraining hand upon Hancock's arm:

"That is not for us," he said. "We belong to the cabinet."

The Americans carried the firelock that had fought the Indian, used by their sires in King Philip's war, and since hung over the fireplace. They used the drum that beat at Louisburg, led by men who had served under Wolfe at Quebec.

The firearms of America and Europe were intimately related in early Colonial history. John Mason, a soldier bred in the Netherlands, fought the Pequots with "Bastard muskets, full muskets, fowling pieces, matchlocks with and without rests." The barrels were from four to six and one-half feet long. They were brought by the Puritans in 1628 or 1629. Americans had military arms used by adherents of King Charles or Oliver Cromwell. The white man fought with flintlock guns. Bayonets were scarce amongst the Colonists. The arm of the British under Marlborough at Blenheim, also under Wellington at Waterloo, was Brown Bess. This musket—like the pistol fired by Major Pitcairn on the Green,—was a flintlock. Captain John Parker and Captain Isaac Davis volleyed with anything that would shoot.

The sluggish Concord river was the Rubicon of the British. It was the reveille of the Republic. Then and there began the retreat of the British power from America.

There are a good many of us who talk a good deal about our Revolutionary ancestors, but who, if our positions were reversed, couldn't accomplish as much as they did.

Street and steam cars, telegraphs, telephones, postal express service, the wireless, automobiles and air ships did not exist on Concord's great day. Breech loading arms were not then in fashion. Ribs of steel and nerves of wire were not potential, then, as now, when Earth is a whisper gallery. Intercommunication was not facile or expeditious. Newspapers were rare factors.

So far as this country is concerned the Revolutionist's horizon was not broad;—'twas limited by the traditions of Jamestown and Plymouth rock. The Atlantic, on Lexington day, was longer in crossing than the Pacific is now. Arms, not arbitration, settled the issues involved. The greatest enemy of the future is the past, if you refuse to allow progression. Most of you are of New England lineage. We are the custodians of their political and historical truths.

Massachusetts is no longer of one blood. Alien elements should look to us to note how far we fulfill the objects of our Society. We should lead in all the qualities that do become a man.

RESOLVE ENDORSING SAMUEL ADAMS

Offered by Walter Kendall Watkins, Feb. 22, 1910

WHEREAS Samuel Adams was a collector of taxes in the town of Boston from 1756 to 1764 inclusive, and in the year 1760 there occurred a great fire which consumed many houses in the ward of which he was collector, in sympathy with the sufferers and on account of the financial depression, he was lenient in collecting—and

WHEREAS, by the law of the Province, he was held liable for the collection of all taxes in his precinct and was thus forced by his leniency to utilize the first moneys collected yearly to balance the tax account of the preceding year—and

WHEREAS in 1764, to meet the amount of the tax he found his receipts so small that he was in default of a sum to balance his accounts, and in 1765 after his election as collector he declined to serve and further increase his default. Unable by conditions to collect, the town's treasurer, as by law required, brought suit in 1767 against his personal bond, and by agreement with Mr. Adams a judgment was rendered for £1463/3/10 in 1768—and

WHEREAS the townspeople being cognizant of the circumstances, voted in town meeting to stay the levy of execution on the judgment, and also by "a great majority" refused to reconsider that vote. Samuel Adams did then petition the town to accept for collection the list of debts due him in outstanding taxes and also accept £1106/11 in cash and give him a final discharge. The action on this petition after a debate is shown in the town records: "It was moved and the Question accordingly put—That a Committee be appointed to take Mr. Adams' petition into consideration and report as soon as may be, which passed in the Negative—also moved that the List of Outstanding Taxes exhibited by said Mr. Adams to the Selectmen be read in this meeting; which Question being put passed in the Negative. Then a motion was made and seconded that the Prayer of the Petition be granted and that a Person be now chosen to receive the said List and Collect the Outstanding Taxes—and the Question being accordingly put—Passed in the Affirmative by a very great majority"—and

WHEREAS for the further relief of Mr. Adams by the request of the town the General Court assembled in Boston and with full knowledge of the case passed an Act enabling Mr. Pierrepont to collect these outstanding taxes and the royal governor Bernard approved the same—and

WHEREAS the citizens of Boston at the annual town meeting elected Mr. Adams as one of their representatives in 1766 and yearly up to the Revolution and he was the clerk of the house and placed on important committees of the town and province,

THEREFORE BE IT RESOLVED that we, the Massachusetts Society Sons of the American Revolution, feel that the above record of facts, the endorsement of Mr. Adams by his fellow townsmen and action by the Provincial government are sufficient to place his name above the aspersions cast on his fame by biased critics.

Unanimously adopted.

HERBERT W. KIMBALL,
Secretary.
